Bond vetoes pay hike bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has vetoed a proposed 47 per cent increase in legislative salaries, and legislators say they will not attempt to override the Governor's action.

Saying the bill was "excessive at this time," the Governor Thursday rejected the hike which would have raised the annual salary of state lawmakers from $8,400 to $12,400 and cost state taxpayers an additional $889,000 each year.

House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, said no plans are being made to override the measure which passed by the minimum number of votes in the Senate and one above the minimum in the House.

The House leader said the raise was justified, noting that the increase spread out over the period since the last salary hike in 1967 amounted to less than 5 per cent a year.

House Democratic floor leader Kenneth Rothman of Clayton said that the legislature has lost "exceptional members" to jobs offering better salaries. He interpreted Bond's veto as a problem in timing.

"Philosophically, he seems to agree with me," Rothman said.

Bond said in his veto message that the raise "established a poor example for the public, who we serve, to provide a substantial increase in lawmakers' salaries at a time when the state is required to trim programs for its citizens."

He noted a citizens panel on legislative reform rejected a legislative salary of $12,000 and favored a $10,500 level, along with other reforms.

Bond said the raise would bring the legislature closer to becoming a full-time body. He said full-time sessions in California have proven "disastrous."

Bond also criticized the full-time lawmakers in Congress as being out of touch with the people.

Reacting to the veto, Sen. John Schneider, D-St. Louis, said, "that makes the session a failure."

Rothman added, "If we are going to have a high type legislature, we have to pay a salary commensurate with indusry."

While the citizens panel suggested $10,500, Rothman noted that inflation should be considered in reaching a figure.

"Should inflation continue unchecked, the compensation herein suggested would be inadequate," the panel report said. "Additional increases based on a cost-of-living index might be considered at that time."

Rothman said, "Even their suggestion would be inadequate with inflation at 12 per cent last year, and who knows what it will be in the future."

Bond said he interpreted the report as meaning that inflationary increases shouldn't be considered until after the hike would go into effect in 1977.

The governor reminded legislators that he has approved a pay hike for the legislative staffs, a raise in daily living expenses for legislators from $10 to $25 and an increase in mileage expense for legislators from 10 cents to 12 cents per mile.

"At a time of economic downturn, high unemployment and recessionary inflation, private individuals, businesses and other government agencies are required to take staps to excercise fiscal responsibility," he said.

The pay raise wouldn't serve the people or restore public confidence in state government, Bond said.

Senate okays death bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the second time this session, the Missouri Senate has approved a death penalty bill, despite arguments that capital punishment is immoral and that the proposed bill is unconstitional.

"We spent many days on this bill for the past two years and this year," said Sen. Maurice Schecther, "and we'll spend many more days next session after the bill's declared unconstitutionl."

The Creve Coeur Democrat was joined by Sen. William Waters who called it a "step backwards."

But it was St. Louis Democrat Lawrence lee who made the most impassioned plea to reject the bill, which calls for the use of the gas chamber for anyone co victed of premeditated murder.

Quoting Scripture, Lee noted that graves were opened and the skies darkened when Jesus Christ was crucified.

"Somebody was trying to tell us then that execution was wrong. 'Vengeance is mine, sayeth the Lord,'" the majoirty leader said.

But another high-ranking senator, President Pro Tem William Cason, pointed out that none of the senators "had spoken up for the innocent."

Cason said statistics could not show what effect, one way or another, the death penalty had in deterring crime, but he added that he believed it would be a deterrent to crime in Missouri.

Citing 25 years of experience in the legal profession, the Clinton Democrat said there were those who made a business out of armed robbery and killing.

He said armed robbers "will consider this a risk of doing business."

New Florence Republican Ralph Uthlaut said that he'd prefer to live in a society where there is no need for a death penalty.

But he aded that there is too much leniency in the legal profession, and "we're all paying for it."

Under the proposed bill, a person would be executed in the gas chamber if convicted of "capital murder."

"A person is guilty of capital murder if he unlawfully, willfully, knowingly, deliberately and with premeditation kills or causes the killing of another human being," the bill says.

Identifying testimony is allowed

BLOOMFIELD--A motion to suppress testimony regarding indentification of two armed robbery and kidnaping suspects and statements made at the Stoddard County sheriff's office during the early morning hours of Jan. 16 was denied Thursday in Circuit Court by Judge Flake McHaney.

Attorneys representing Allen Martin, 25, and Russell Martin, 36, of Dexter against charges of armed robbery of a Dexter service station and kidnaping service station attendant Denzil Morgan, 17, and his wife, Diann Morgan, 16, stipulated that the kidnaping victims heard the names of both defendents over police radio equipment while enroute to the sheriff's office to make a statement regarding the robbery.

They also argued that when the Morgans arrived at the sheriff's office, they witnessed one of the defendants being taken into the sheriff's office. Also, they claimed that when aksed to identify the two men, only the Martins were presented for identification instead of a lineup with several men.

The defense attorneys also asked that all statements made while both the Morgans and the Martins were at the sheriff's office be suppressed.

During the hearing, Mrs. Morgan was asked to identify Allen and Russell Martin from 18 spectators who were seated in the courtroom. She readily identified both Allen and Russell Morgan as the two men who participated in the armed robbery and kidnaping.

According to previous testimony in a preliminary hearing, both Diann and Denzil Morgan testified that the Martin brothers walked into the staton at approximately 1 p.m. on Jan. 16 armed with a deer rifle and forced Morgan to hand over

Blackmon gets 20 years

CHARLESTON--Robert Blackmon, 23, of Haywood City was sentenced to 20 years in prison today for the murder of Julie Lee Thompson, 70 of Haywood City on Nov. 28, 1974.

Blackmon pleaded guilty just before the trail was scheduled to begin before Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig.

Blackmon pleaded guilty just before the trial was scheduled to begin before Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig. The case was transferred to Mississippi County on a change of venue from Scott County.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore said he recommended the 20-year sentence on the second-degree murder charge after a round of plea bargaining with Blackmon's attorney. Blackmon promised not to seek probation in any form, Moore said.

The woman was found beaten and stabbed to death in her home after relatives who lived next door discovered her lights were still on at 2 a.m.

Moore quoted Blackman as saying he beat the woman with a board with an old nail in it, then beat her with a broom stick and a piece of pipe and then stabbed her, she because she refused to go to bed with him.

Moore said robbery had been discounted before Blackmon's statement because the house had not been searched and $360 was left in a paper bag near the spot where the woman's body was found.

Moore said the witnesses and jury were in the courtroom and he was prepared to try Blackmon if he had changed his mind about pleading guilty.

30-year sentence set aside

ST. LOUIS--A Missouri Supreme Court judge Thursday set aside a 30-year prison sentence against Bobby Griffith, a Stoddard County man who received the sentence on Sept. 7, 1971 after pleading guilty to a charge of sodomy in Stoddard County Circuit Court.

Griffith, along with three other men, William Earl Vandiver, Danny Raye DeBerry and Floyd Dean Handley, were accused of committing acts of sodomy in the Stoddard County jail against two other inmates, Andrew Thomas Miller, Jr. and Timothy Raymond Lefler.

Miller and Lefler told authorities that Griffith and the other men forced them to commit numerous acts of sodomy by beating and stamping them and threatening to kill them if they told anyone.

According to court records, on June 17, 1971, Miller was taken from the bullpen at the jail after receiving a severe cut over the right eye. Miller then asked to speak to Sheriff Edsel Edwards, whom he told about the acts of sodomy.

According to the Stoddard County circuit clerk's office, Griffith filed a moton for a new trial tin Stoddard County, stating that he had a hearing problem and that at the time of sentencing he understood his attorney to say if he pleaded guilty he would receive a five-year sentence instead of the 30 he received. The motion was denied.

He then filed a motion for a new trial to the Missouri Court of Appeals, which was overruled. Following that action, he appealed to the Missouri Supreme Court, which resulted in Thursday's decision.

To suppress information

Judge takes motion under advisement

BLOOMFIELD — Circuit Court Judge Flake McHaney took under advisement Thursday a motion to suppress certain information ertaining to a case against Dennis Gott, 17, of Dexter, who is charged with the armed robbery of the O. D. Swift home near Dexter.

The defense attorney asked that all information pertaining to merchandise obtained in a search of an abandoned house on the Gott farm and that any remarks made by Gott or members of the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department while Gott was in custody be suppressed.

The defense argued that the abandoned house on the Gott farm was searched illegally without the consent of Dennis Gott or his parents. They also maintain that the house as not abandoned, as it contained several pieces of furniture and showed signs of having been used for grain storage.

According to testimony from Sheriff Ralph Mouser, authorities found numerous items hidden in the house that had been stolen in several area burglaries. However, Mouser also testified that a sawed-off shotgun believed to have been used in the robbery was the only item pertaining to the Swift case recovered at that time.

He said the two guns stolen from the Swift home were recovered later and identified by Swift.

Several highway patrol and sheriff's department officers testified that on the day of the robbery they traced footprints from the Swift home to the area of the Gott home, where they discovered a pair of wet tennis shoes owned by Dennis Gott that matched footprints found near the scene of the robbery.

According to testimony by sheriff's officers, Swift told authorities that a young man wearing a ski mask entered his home armed with a sawed-off

Mrs. Howlett stepping down

CHARLESTON—Saturday will be Mrs. Evelyn Howlett's final day as magistrate and probate clerk of Mississippi County, a position from which she is retiring after holding the job since April 9, 1951.

During the 24-year span she has worked under four judges, T.B. Russell, J.M. Haw and C. Frank Reeves, all deceased, and T. J. Brown Jr., the present magistrate and probate judge who was sworn in Jan. 1, 1963.

A native of East Prairie, she is the daughter of Mrs. C. W. Rytter, who now lives in Charleston, and the late C. W. Rytter. She and her husband, Ellis W. Howlett, whom she married in June 1935, have one daughter, Mrs. Charles L. Fox, and two granddaughters of Monroe, La.

The courthouse has been a second home for the Howletts, for not only has she worked there more than 24 years, her husband retired in January of this year as Circuit Court clerk and recorder of deeds, positions he held more than 45 years.

The decision to retire was not an easy one for Mrs. Howlett, but one that was prompted by her husband, who wanted her to "take it easier" and perhaps keep him company.

The Howletts are not traveling buffs, but trips to Louisiana to see their families are on the agenda for the coming months. Her free time will also allow her to enjoy her hobbies of knitting and needle work and more involvement in church work at the United Methodist Church.

A coffee in her honor was held Wednesday at the courthouse, hosted by other employes. She was presented a silver casserole, corsage of pink rosebuds and a card signed by 48 fellow courthouse employes.

Mrs. Ida Phillips of Charleston, who will replace Mrs. Howlett Monday, has been receiving on the job training for the position for the past few weeks.

From 1961 until July 1974, Mrs. Phillips was employed by the law firm of Banta, Banta & Hopkins and also assisted her husband, Fred Phillips, a building contractor. She is the daughter of Mrs. W. A. McTeague of Charleston.

Clerk to retire

We noticed recently where the City Council and the advisory committee to the City Council on the sales tax has ordered an election. We are very sorry because we don't believe it ought to be passed. We think it is $400 and some odd thousand dollars that they'll just give them to spend as they see fit and of course, they are saying they are going to do so and so, and they are not going to do anything. They will just keep it in there and the merchants are having a hard time anyway without any additional money for what they have to sell.

WHY CRIME INCREASES

There are, of course, many reasons why the quarterly FBI crime statistics show a steady rise in the crime rate. The Honorable Charles Malik of Lebanon recently cited the "moral crash throughout the world," and it doesn't require 20-20 vision to see the moral decline taking place in America. Certainly the rejection of moral values in our society is a major factor.

But it must be said that one important reason for skyrocketing crime figures comes from within the law enforcement agencies themselves — including courts, prosecutors and prisons.

Janet Chusmir, writing in the Miami Herald, cites a case in point. At a law seminar held in Miami, an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Florida "warned his audience, mostly law enforcement officers, about making arrests outside of their own municipalities — specifically when they are not on duty and when not backed up by the municipality."

He said it didn't make any difference if they came upon a felony being committed.

One in the audience, who happened to be a Judge, asked if that meant if a policeman saw a woman being raped, he should ignore it?

"That's exactly what I mean," the Assistant Attorney General replied.

And that's exactly why the victims of crime continue to suffer while the perpetrators of crime are having a field day.

TALKING DETROIT'S LANGUAGE

The House Ways and Means Committee, by a divided 21-13 vote, has opted for a carrot- and - stick approach to encourage automakers to build more efficient cars.

Beginning with the 1978 model year, a special tax of 2 per cent would be imposed on the wholesale price of all new carss failing to achieve an average of 18 miles per gallon or higher and 5 per cent on cars getting less than 15. By the 1980 model year, the tax would range from 2 per cent on those getting less than 19 m.p.g. to 7 per cent on those getting less than 15. The industry average is currently around 16 m.p.g.

Some lawmakers have attacked the proposed standard as weak and ineffective and no more than the industry has already indicated it can probably meet. Yet it may not really matter what Congress finally does or does not do in this matter. There happens to exist a far more powerful incentive to improve automobile mileage — the marketplace.

To the surprise of Detroit and confounding of all its expectations, imported cars, some of them claiming miles - per- gallon performance in the high 30s, are selling at record numbers, even as the domestic industry continues in its slump. And it is definitely not because the imports are inexpensive any more.

If American automakers cannot read the message the foreigners are sending them right now, no threat of a special tax in the future — which would only be passed on to the consumer, anyway — is likely to get them stirring.

A REPORT TO OUR OUR SUBSCRIBERS AND ADVERTISERS

Since The Standard was notified by our newsprint supplier in Canada this past week that the paperworkers' demand for a 41 per cent "wage increase" may lead to a strike, we are attempting to increase our inventory of newsprint, just in case.

While the negotiations are going on between the pulp and paper industry and the paperworkers' union, we felt it was time to inform our subscribers and advertisers about the increasing price of newsprint since 1965. Also, cost of newsprint in publishing The Standard is the second largest annual expense, next to the payroll which is first.

Listed below are the price increases:

Year	Price Per Ton	Per Cent Increase Since 1965
1965	$134.00
1966	136.92	2.18
1967	140.50	4.85
1968	142.00	5.97
1969	147.00	9.70
1970	152.00	13.43
1971	157.33	17.41
1972	164.58	22.82
1973	175.00	30.60
1974	234.00	74.63
1975	260.00	94.03

Since the end of 1965, the average price per ton of newsprint delivered at New York City (which applies to The Standard) has risen from $134 to $260, according to Canadian Pulp and Paper Assn. figures. It is important to note at this point that newsprint is presently selling for $280 per ton in the western United States and for $270 per ton in parts of the Midwest, South and East.

This jump from $134 to $260 represents a rate increase of 94 per cent.

From the end of 1965 to the end of 1973, newsprint costs rose by $41 from $134 to $175--32.5 per cent of the last nine year's increase. The remaining 67.5 per cent increase in the per ton cost of newsprint has come in the last year and a quarter from the end of 1973 to the present. This is $85 of the $126 increase total.

At the beginning of 1975, manufacturers raised their prices to the $260-$280 range, placing this year's price at between 11.11 per cent to 14.28 per cent.

A further check by The Standard shows that newsprint prices prior to 1965 remained at the $134 per ton mark from 1958 through that year--a period of seven years without an increase.

Although from all indications The Standard will soon face another newsprint price increase, we wish to assure our subscribers and advertisers that all Standard employes are working to reduce any expenses and costs that we possibly can. We are trying to hold our subscription and advertising rates down but there are some things we can't control.

The New York Times carried a fascinating piece on President Ford the other week. Actually, it was dull-but in a fascinating way.

The paper hired John Hersey, the distinguished author of "Hiroshima," to sit with the President every day for a whole week and write about the experience.

The results took up an entire issue of the 140-page Times' Sunday Magazine. The project is intrinsically fascinating, a glimpse behind the curtain in the grand chamber of the Wizard of Oz, except that in this case it's more like the Wizard of Ox.

For the truth of the matter is that Mr. Ford, in private, is even duller than the public Mr. Ford.

And that is an understatement. President Ford floats on clouds of dullness.

Dullness by its very nature, is difficult to dramatize in a single incident (it is the interminable quality of Hersey's piece that gives it its special character). However, let us try.

At one point the President is being coached by his gag writer, Bob Orben, in the delivery of a funny line in an upcoming speech. It's a Bob Hope sort of line-- "On Monday, Carl Albert picked up Bella Abzug's hat by mistake...put it on...and disappeared for three days!" the President is to say. He reads the line for Orben who says, "Very good."

But the President, always the perfectionist, says: "If I get a laugh-would it be a good idea to gesture, as if I'm putting on a big hat?"

"I don't think it's necessary," says Orben. "They'll be getting a visual picture. But if you're more comfortable doing it that way...."

"It's a little demonstrative," says the President.

"It wouldn't hurt," says Orben.

That's the level, if not the content, of most of the inhouse debate that is portrayed in Hersey's piece. Every time the President says "there are three points I'd like to make..." he drills home the points by counting them off on his fingers.

The President greets a group of high school students by delivering a fourth grade lecture on separation of powers and checks and balances. With intense sincerity!

Dull.

The only relief from this monotone is provided by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, and his relief is that of shrill husteria. Mr. Rockefeller, it seems, is one of your all-time great "nervous Nellies," given to jumping up at meetings with apocalyptic predictions.

When the talk turns to supertankers in American deepwater ports, Rocky is seized by visions of them blowing up, taking entire cities with them.

In a general discussion of catalytic converters on autos, he suddenly bursts in with: "Mr. President, I fear that this could really become a serious political problem and perhaps a liability next year. I know we will have examples of garages catching on fire and people burning to death, cars catching on fire, gas stations exploding--all because of the catalytic converter. If someone wanted to make this a political issue in 1976 and brought out these gruesome details and stories, they would put the burden on your back, and they would be asking why you didn't tell them that this was a problem...."

It's easy to see why Mr. Rockefeller was so in favor of building fallout shelters in the early '60s. If he can get that excited about the dangers of catalytic converters, imagine the effect the anticipation of a nuclear war must have on him. He has a vivid imagination, if nothing else.

And through it all sits President Ford, taking the good news with the bad, nodding, puffing on his pipe. Calm.

Fascinatingly dull.

Des Moines Register

THE ECONOMY GOES DOWN, CRIME GOES UP

A group of 16 mayors was in the nation's capital a few weeks ago seeking federal funds, as mayors so often are these days. In this case, the object was government assistance in creating summer jobs for youths.

Visiting a "street academy" for teen-agers who had dropped out or been kicked out of school, he mayors were told by one youth that, "If we don't have anything to do, we turn to crime."

That was it. Not, "If we can't find jobs, we turn to crime to feed ourselves and our families." Simply, "If we don't have anything to do, we turn to crime."

This kind of remark, which smacks of outright blackmail, suggests that the supposed equation between idleness and crime, or poverty and crime, is a little too pat. After all, Americans did not turn to crime in any great numbers during the Depression, when there was real hardship for millions.

The Depression did, however, produce a generation of nortorious bank robbers, and there is growing evidence that there is a relationship between this kind of crime and the current downturn of the economy. For fiscal 1974, the FBI reports, bank robbery rates were up 37 per cent compared to a 2 per cent rise in overall robberies.

The jump was most marked in large cities over 500,000 inhabitants. Bank robberies in rural, static communities were less frequent.

It is the inner cities that have been hardest hit by unemployment, reports a manufacturer of security systems.

The search for a connection between the economy and the crime rate yields another indicator: The firt-time bad-check passer. In contrast to robbery, this is largely an unarmed crime often practiced by normally law-abiding citizens motivated by financial pressures.

In the fiscal year just passed, the number of forged checks increased 9 per cent over the preceding year.

"It might be accurate to say that an increase in bad-check passers indictes that the economy is bad or getting worse for the average consumer," says a spokesman for the manufacturer, American District Telegraph Co.

Yet in determining the casual relationship between bank crimes and fluctuations in the economy, other force increasing bank crime should be taken into account, the comapny cautions.

There is evidence that "policy decisions" by organized crime or gangs inflate the robbery rate in some cities. The impact of professional theives appears to have contributed in no small part to the astonishing jump in bank forgeries and robberies in at least one city, New York.

Another noneconomic contributor to the increase in bank robberies might well be the increased number of banks themselves, particularly small, relatively isolated branch banks in the suburbs that may not be as extensively secured as the larger parent banks.

Clearly, the best deterrent to bank robbing is the regular apprehension and punishment of aspiring robbers. Such controls as holdup cameras are one of the major reasons that bank robbers are caught more often than other kinds of robbers.

Even so, only 27 per cent of all bank robbers are actually arrested.

Despite all the controlsthat an be devised, and whatever the state of the economy, bank robbers will keep on trying, because, as robber Willie Sutton once put it: "That's where the money is."

XXX

AVOIDING THE ISSUE

Surveys have indicated that there is, at last, widespread recognition of the fact that inflation is a creature of federal government spending. Moreover, there is evidence that taxpayers are beginning to realize that the U.S. Congress is a chief spending mechanism of government. Thus, the only hope of controlling inflation lies in improving the congressional tax-spending machinery.

Business Week reports that, "... the Congress is struggling over a proposed new system that would radically change the way it deals with spending, taxes, and deficits." A joint congressional committee made up of top members of the revenue-raising and appropriations committees of both houses of Congrtess are studying the new system which would "... include not only an enforceable spending ceiling but compulsory income surtaxes to cover unacceptable deficits any time Congress breaks through the ceiling."

Congressmen are quick to point out reforms that are allegedly needed in private enterprise and are quick to write new regulations, ostensibly to protect consumers and taxpayers. At the moment, no reform is needed more urgently than a reform in government spending. No reform could do more to protect the security and savings of all citizens.

Chavez At the Front: New bill gives farm workers right to massive harvest time strikes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — This story of the lettuce-grapes-Gallo wine wars is hydra-headed, mostly reported by passionate partisans of the charismatic United Farm Workers president Cesar Chavez, who, I believe, sees himself and is seen by dedicated and devout supporters, as the leader and savior of some three million farm workers across the land.

Well, what intrigued me as a correspondent who has covered some though wars -- on the industrtial as well as on the more bloody trench-type fronts -- are, first, the development by the University of California of a hybrid tomato which is more oblong than round, and the invention of a tomato-picking machine.

The oblong tomatoes, one learns of during a long trek up from San Luis Obispo to Sacramento are bred so they'll be easier for mechanized harvesting. And the newest machine can decide whether a tomato is ripe for picking simply by squeezing it gently. If the produce is too hard, the machine just goes away. Rolls on.

It's the old cotton gin phenomenon all over again -- and the picking machines, says the Bureau of Labor Statistics, means there will be only 1.6 million farm workers of all kinds by 1985. That's in just ten years and Chavez will be in his 50s.

So whoever wants to unionize the nation's farm workers -- and they are in states you'd believe least likely to have them -- such as New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Washington, as well as Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, Louisiana and Florida, must move swiftly. If organized, the farm workers can become a massive social and political force. So will their leaders whoever they will be.

But to make good his vision Chavez has to drive the teamsters from the field, and general president Frank Fitzsimmons and Andy Anderson, head of the Western Conference of Teamsters, aren't about to be driven out.

There's a new bill in the state legislature here getting very little coverage across the nation, which the "Chavistas" hope will become law soon and take effect Sept. 1 -- and give them the chance to rout the massive Teamsters union. The latter now has some 50,000 under 400 contracts and is adding to them each week such as the new pacts covering some 3,000 strawberry workers in the Coachella Valley and the Oxnard district.

The bill is complex and now protects the Teamsters' 400 contracts as well as pacts which the building and construction workers have on the "ranches." Produce picking is a process going all the way from the vine to the sheds and warehouses and it may surprise many to know that the carpenters, operating engineers, et al., are also involved in the Chavez campaigns. He would have liked an industrial type (old CIO formula) which would have made each ranch one big union field. But the construction trades, the molders, the distillery and wine workers and glass bottle blowers, all AF L-CIO, are in the "fields" as well as the teamsters.

There was strong support for the inclusion of a mandatory industrial-type union in the proposed law -- especially from Chavez's devoted supportes in the California State Catholic Conference. But in effect, Gov. Jerry Brown amended and reamended the bill after the Teamsters threatened a four-state agricultural strike.

So the craft union lines will stay and Chavez will have to take those, too, if he wants complete leadership in the vast fields and valleys.

Many on all sides believe the new farm workers bill which creates a sort of statewide agricultural labor relations board in the image of the NLRB replete with secret ballot decertification moves and union-non-union elections -- will bring peace to this nationally vital fruit-vegetable-citrus-wine country.

I don't. I believe the war's just beginning. The bill permits strikes at harvest time. And calls for elections at a moment of the greatest concentration of workers -- which means harvest time in the migratory farm workers area.

It also permits workers who haven't been out of the "industry" more than three years to vote in these elections even if the workers are no longer employed on the ranches.

There'll be feuds, indeed, when names of workers who haven't been around for a while appear on the decertification cards and on the election rolls.

And the bill permits secondary boycotts if it's a product information boycott -- The type Chavez has been running for years – and now is personally pushing across Canada, the largest grape and lettuce importer.

We'll know soon enough if there can be peace in the "factories in the fields" by next autumn harvest time. Real secret ballot elections properly monitored and faithfully respected by all sides will mean peace. Defiance will mean war, wasted and rotting fruits and vegetables in the valleys, higher prices in the cities and a shakier dollar abroad because of the loss of big Eropean markets.

That is until the machine cometh -- and you should see the new one which reaps carrots, millions of them, untouched by human hands.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Ford's Budget Woes

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Ford is caught in a dilemma over the budget.

He wants to hold down government spending. Congressional leaders obligingly have offered to slash the defense budgety. But the President is fiercely opposed to military cuts.

He also wants to hold down the deficit. But his advisers have urged him to extend the tax rebate for another year. Not only will the economy continue to require stimulation, they have told him, but the Democrats will continue the temporary tax cuts anyway. Therefore, the President may as well take credit for the extension, they suggested.

Meeting secretly with Republican congressional leaders, the President commented that the House budget committee's proposed $72 billion deficit and the Senate committee's $67 billion deficit aren't as bad as he had expected.

"The total figures are more than we wanted," said the President, "but are a lot better than the $100 billion we feared."

"We're ashamed," interjected Rep. Delbert Latta, R.-Ohio, "that the Senate made a better cut than we did." But he insisted that "I don't see how we can bring our $72 billion down to $60 billion."

Ford's goal is to hold the deficit to the $60 billion figure. But Rep. Elford Cederberg, R.-Mich., warned: "We won't even get close to your objective unless we sustain a lot of vetoes. Why should we vote for $60 billion and lose?"

Defense Secretary James Schlesinger objected to the House's proposed $9 billion military cut.

"It's so severe," he protested, "that world confidence in us goes down even more dangerously. I hope we can resist so damaging a cut."

The President, breaking in, warned that "we're going to make a strong substantive issue about their cuts. . .I'll go around the country and fight like hell ... And if anyone wants to join the issue, I'll welcome it."

NAME DROPPING: Leon Jaworski, the former Watergate prosecutor, has been used unwittingly in an attempt to squelch a criminal investigation.

Jaworski's name was dropped by one of his law partners in an effort to persuade the Justice Department to halt a criminal investigtion of Ven-Fuel.

This firm, reportedly half-owned by Venezuela, has been accused of overcharging the Jacksonville, Fla., Electric Authority for fuel oil. The utility company added the estimated $26 million to its customers' bills.

As we reported last February, the Federal Energy Administration had demonstrated a strange reluctance to press criminal charges against Ven-Fuel. Investigators for Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., found that there had been a concerted campaign inside the FEA to kill the criminal case.

Orchestrating this effort were lawyers Walter Surrey and Tom McDade, the latter from the powerful Jaorski firm in Houston. The firm represents International Systems and Control, a co-owner of Ven-Fuel.

Documents subpoenaed by Moss and sworn testimony show that the two attorneys pulled strings in an attempt to stop the criminal investigtion.

"Mr. Jaworski has taken a personal interest in this case," McDade is quoted as telling assistant U.S. attorney Peter Dearing.

But Dearing stood up to the pressure and started keeping detailed memos of all his actions to insure the integrity of the investigation.

Footnote: We were unable to reach McDade, but Jaworski told us he doubted McDade would "toss around my name like that" and praised him as a ..."responsible and ethical attorney."

WALLACE'S ARMY: Alabama's Gov. George Wallace, who commands the state militia, has accumulated a "personal military staff" of about 40,000 honorary lieutenant colonels.

The appointeees, who are scattered all over the country, receive a distinctive certificate bearing the state seal and the governor's signature.

The Alabama taxpayers, of course, foot the bill for the printing and mailings. Billy Joe Camp, the governor's spokesman, said the certificates are issued under state law and generate "good will for the state of Alabama."

They also generate good will for George Wallace, who happens to be campaigning for the presidency. Camp conceded that "to say (the honorary military appointments) had no connection" with the Wallace presidential campaign "would be somewhat erroneous." But he claimed there was "no overt effort to use the awards in the campaign."

NASSIKAS MEMO: Although he is supposed to be impartial, Federal Power Chairman John Nassikas has usually smiled upon the big utility firms and frowned upon the consumers.

But in a recent memo, he surpassed himself by suggesting to his economists that they find "an expert economist" who would testify before federal agencies to support Nassikas' viesws.

The purpose would be to speed up payments to natural gas producers.

A REPORT TO OUR OUR SUBSCRIBERS AND ADVERTISERS

Since The Standard was notified by our newsprint supplier in Canada this past week that the paperworkers' demand for a 41 per cent "wage increase" may lead to a strike, we are attempting to increase our inventory of newsprint, just in case.

While the negotiations are going on between the pulp and paper industry and the paperworkers' union, we felt it was time to inform our subscribers and advertisers about the increasing price of newsprint since 1965. Also, cost of newsprint in publishing The Standard is the second largest annual expense, next to the payroll which is first.

Listed below are the price increases:

Year	Price Per Ton	Per Cent Increase Since 1965
1965	$134.00
1966	136.92	2.18
1967	140.50	4.85
1968	142.00	5.97
1969	147.00	9.70
1970	152.00	13.43
1971	157.33	17.41
1972	164.58	22.82
1973	175.00	30.60
1974	234.00	74.63
1975	260.00	94.03

Since the end of 1965, the average price per ton of newsprint delivered at New York City (which applies to The Standard) has risen from $134 to $260, according to Canadian Pulp and Paper Assn. figures. It is important to note at this point that newsprint is presently selling for $280 per ton in the western United States and for $270 per ton in parts of the Midwest, South and East.

This jump from $134 to $260 represents a rate increase of 94 per cent.

From the end of 1965 to the end of 1973, newsprint costs rose by $41 from $134 to $175--32.5 per cent of the last nine year's increase. The remaining 67.5 per cent increase in the per ton cost of newsprint has come in the last year and a quarter from the end of 1973 to the present. This is $85 of the $126 increase total.

At the beginning of 1975, manufacturers raised their prices to the $260-$280 range, placing this year's price at between 11.11 per cent to 14.28 per cent.

A further check by The Standard shows that newsprint prices prior to 1965 remained at the $134 per ton mark from 1958 through that year--a period of seven years without an increase.

Although from all indications The Standard will soon face another newsprint price increase, we wish to assure our subscribers and advertisers that all Standard employes are working to reduce any expenses and costs that we possibly can. We are trying to hold our subscription and advertising rates down but there are some things we can't control.

The New York Times carried a fascinating piece on President Ford the other week. Actually, it was dull-but in a fascinating way.

The paper hired John Hersey, the distinguished author of "Hiroshima," to sit with the President every day for a whole week and write about the experience.

The results took up an entire issue of the 140-page Times' Sunday Magazine. The project is intrinsically fascinating, a glimpse behind the curtain in the grand chamber of the Wizard of Oz, except that in this case it's more like the Wizard of Ox.

For the truth of the matter is that Mr. Ford, in private, is even duller than the public Mr. Ford.

And that is an understatement. President Ford floats on clouds of dullness.

Dullness by its very nature, is difficult to dramatize in a single incident (it is the interminable quality of Hersey's piece that gives it its special character). However, let us try.

At one point the President is being coached by his gag writer, Bob Orben, in the delivery of a funny. line in an upcoming speech. It's a Bob Hope sort of line-- "On Monday, Carl Albert picked up Bella Abzug's hat by mistake...put it on...and disappeared for three days!" the President is to say. He reads the line for Orben who says, "Very good."

But the President, always the perfectionist, says: "If I get a laugh-would it be a good idea to gesture, as if I'm putting on a big hat?"

"I don't think it's necessary," says Orben. "They'll be getting a visual picture. But if you're more comfortable doing it that way...."

"It's a little demonstrative," says the President.

"It wouldn't hurt," says Orben.

That's the level, if not the content, of most of the inhouse debate that is portrayed in Hersey's piece. Every time the President says "there are three points I'd like to make..." he drills home the points by counting them off on his fingers.

The President greets a group of high school students by delivering a fourth grade lecture on separation of powers and checks and balances. With intense sincerity!

Dull.

The only relief from this monotone is provided by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, and his relief is that of shrill husteria. Mr. Rockefeller, it seems, is one of your all-time great "nervous Nellies," given to jumping up at meetings with apocalyptic predictions.

When the talk turns to supertankers in American deepwater ports, Rocky is seized by visions of them blowing up, taking entire cities with them.

In a general discussion of catalytic converters on autos, he suddenly bursts in with: "Mr. President, I fear that this could really become a serious political problem and perhaps a liability next year. I know we will have examples of garages catching on fire and people burning to death, cars catching on fire, gas stations exploding--all because of the catalytic converter. If someone wanted to make this a political issue in 1976 and brought out these gruesome details and stories, they would put the burden on your back, and they would be asking why you didn't tell them that this was a problem...."

It's easy to see why Mr. Rockefeller was so in favor of building fallout shelters in the early '60s. If he can get that excited about the dangers of catalytic converters, imagine the effect the anticipation of a nuclear war must have on him. He has a vivid imagination, if nothing else.

And through it all sits President Ford, taking the good news with the bad, nodding, puffing on his pipe. Calm.

Fascinatingly dull.

Des Moines Register

THE ECONOMY GOES DOWN, CRIME GOES UP

A group of 16 mayors was in the nation's capital a few weeks ago seeking federal funds, as mayors so often are these days. In this case, the object was government assistance in creating summer jobs for youths.

Visiting a "street academy" for teen-agers who had dropped out or been kicked out of school, he mayors were told by one youth that, "If we don't have anything to do, we turn to crime."

That was it. Not, "If we can't find jobs, we turn to crime to feed ourselves and our families." Simply, "If we don't have anything to do, we turn to crime."

This kind of remark, which smacks of outright blackmail, suggests that the supposed equation between idleness and crime, or poverty and crime, is a little too pat. After all, Americans did not turn to crime in any great numbers during the Depression, when there was real hardship for millions.

The Depression did, however, produce a generation of nortorious bank robbers, and there is growing evidence that there is a relationship between this kind of crime and the current downturn of the economy. For fiscal 1974, the FBI reports, bank robbery rates were up 37 per cent compared to a 2 per cent rise in overall robberies.

The jump was most marked in large cities over 500,000 inhabitants. Bank robberies in rural, static communities were less frequent.

It is the inner cities that have been hardest hit by unemployment, reports a manufacturer of security systems.

The search for a connection between the economy and the crime rate yields another indicator: The firt-time bad-check passer. In contrast to robbery, this is largely an unarmed crime often practiced by normally law-abiding citizens motivated by financial pressures.

In the fiscal year just passed, the number of forged checks increased 9 per cent over the preceding year.

"It might be accurate to say that an increase in bad-check passers indictes that the economy is bad or getting worse for the average consumer," says a spokesman for the manufacturer, American District Telegraph Co.

Yet in determining the casual relationship between bank crimes and fluctuations in the economy, other force increasing bank crime should be taken into account, the comapny cautions.

There is evidence that "policy decisions" by organized crime or gangs inflate the robbery rate in some cities. The impact of professional theives appears to have contributed in no small part to the astonishing jump in bank forgeries and robberies in at least one city, New York.

Another noneconomic contributor to the increase in bank robberies might well be the increased number of banks themselves, particularly small, relatively isolated branch banks in the suburbs that may not be as extensively secured as the larger parent banks.

Clearly, the best deterrent to bank robbing is the regular apprehension and punishment of aspiring robbers. Such controls as holdup cameras are one of the major reasons that bank robbers are caught more often than other kinds of robbers.

Even so, only 27 per cent of all bank robbers are actually arrested.

Despite all the controlsthat an be devised, and whatever the state of the economy, bank robbers will keep on trying, because, as robber Willie Sutton once put it: "That's where the money is."

XXX

AVOIDING THE ISSUE

Surveys have indicated that there is, at last, widespread recognition of the fact that inflation is a creature of federal government spending. Moreover, there is evidence that taxpayers are beginning to realize that the U.S. Congress is a chief spending mechanism of government. Thus, the only hope of controlling inflation lies in improving the congressional tax-spending machinery.

Business Week reports that, "... the Congress is struggling over a proposed new system that would radically change the way it deals with spending, taxes, and deficits." A joint congressional committee made up of top members of the revenue-raising and appropriations committees of both houses of Congrtess are studying the new system which would "... include not only an enforceable spending ceiling but compulsory income surtaxes to cover unacceptable deficits any time Congress breaks through the ceiling."

Congressmen are quick to point out reforms that are allegedly needed in private enterprise and are quick to write new regulations, ostensibly to protect consumers and taxpayers. At the moment, no reform is needed more urgently than a reform in government spending. No reform could do more to protect the security and savings of all citizens.

A prospective Army inductee was being interviewed by the draft board. "What's your occupation?" asked the chairman of the board. "I'm a gag writer." "Let's see you make up a gag." The recruit got up and walked over to the door, where there was a long line of young men waiting, and said, "All you guys can go home now, I got the job."

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

—Chavez At the Front: New bill gives farm workers right to massive harvest time strikes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — This story of the lettuce-grapes-Gallo wine wars is hydra-headed, mostly reported by passionate partisans of the charismatic United Farm Workers president Cesar Chavez, who, I believe, sees himself and is seen by dedicated and devout supporters, as the leader and savior of some three million farm workers across the land.

Well, what intrigued me as a correspondent who has covered some though wars -- on the indusrtial as well as on the more bloody trench-type fronts -- are, first, the development by the University of California of a hybrid tomato which is more oblong than round, and the invention of a tomato-picking machine.

The oblong tomatoes, one learns of during a long trek up from San Luis Obispo to Sacramento are bred so they'll be easier for mechanized harvesting. And the newest machine can decide whether a tomato is ripe for picking simply by squeezing it gently. If the produce is too hard, the machine just goes away. Rolls on.

It's the old cotton gin phenomenon all over again -- and the picking machines, says the Bureau of Labor Statistics, means there will be only 1.6 million farm workers of all kinds by 1985. That's in just ten years and Chavez will be in his 50s.

So whoever wants to unionize the nation's farm workers -- and they are in states you'd believe least likely to have them -- such as New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Washington, as well as Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, Louisiana and Florida, must move swiftly. If organized, the farm workers can become a massive social and political force. So will their leaders whoever they will be.

But to make good his vision Chavez has to drive the teamsters from the field, and general president Frank Fitzsimmons and Andy Anderson, head of the Western Conference of Teamsters, aren't about to be driven out.

There's a new bill in the state legislature here getting very little coverage across the nation, which the "Chavistas" hope will become law soon and take effect Sept. 1 -- and give them the chance to rout the massive Teamsters union. The latter now has some 50,000 under 400 contracts and is adding to them each week such as the new pacts covering some 3,000 strawberry workers in the Coachella Valley and the Oxnard district.

The bill is complex and now protects the Teamsters' 400 contracts as well as pacts which the building and construction workers have on the "ranches." Produce picking is a process going all the way from the vine to the sheds and warehouses and it may surprise many to know that the carpenters, operating engineers, et al., are also involved in the Chavez campaigns. He would have liked an industrial type (old CIO formula) which would have made each ranch one big union field. But the construction trades, the molders, the distillery and wine workers and glass bottle blowers, all AF L-CIO, are in the "fields" as well as the teamsters.

There was strong support for the inclusion of a mandatory industrial-type union in the proposed law -- especially from Chavez's devoted supportes in the California State Catholic Conference. But in effect, Gov. Jerry Brown amended and re-amended the bill after the Teamsters threatened a four-state agricultural strike.

So the craft union lines will stay and Chavez will have to take those, too, if he wants complete leadership in the vast fields and valleys.

Many on all sides believe the new farm workers bill which creates a sort of statewide agricultural labor relations board in the image of the NLRB replete with secret ballot decertification moves and union-non-union elections -- will bring peace to this nationally vital fruit-vegetable-citrus-wine country.

I don't. I believe the war's just beginning. The bill permits strikes at harvest time. And calls for elections at a moment of the greatest concentration of workers -- which means harvest time in the migratory farm workers area.

It also permits workers who haven't been out of the "industry" more than three years to vote in these elections even if the workers are no longer employed on the ranches.

There'll be feuds, indeed, when names of workers who haven't been around for a while appear on the decertification cards and on the election rolls.

And the bill permits secondary boycotts if it's a product information boycott -- The type Chavez has been running for years – and now is personally pushing across Canada, the largest grape and lettuce importer.

We'll know soon enough if there can be peace in the "factories in the fields" by next autumn harvest time. Real secret ballot elections properly monitored and faithfully respected by all sides will mean peace. Defiance will mean war, wasted and rotting fruits and vegetables in the valleys, higher prices in the cities and a shakier dollar abroad because of the loss of big Eropean markets.

That is until the machine cometh -- and you should see the new one which reaps carrots, millions of them, untouched by human hands.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Ford's Budget Woes

By JACK ANDERSON
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — President Ford is caught in a dilemma over the budget.

He wants to hold down government spending. Congressional leaders obligingly have offered to slash the defense budgety. But the President is fiercely opposed to military cuts.

He also wants to hold down the deficit. But his advisers have urged him to extend the tax rebate for another year. Not only will the economy continue to require stimulation, they have told him, but the Democrats will continue the temporary tax cuts anyway. Therefore, the President may as well take credit for the extension, they suggested.

Meeting secretly with Republican congressional leaders, the President commented that the House budget committee's proposed $72 billion deficit and the Senate committee's $67 billion deficit aren't as bad as he had expected.

"The total figures are more than we wanted," said the President, "but are a lot better than the $100 billion we feared."

"We're ashamed," interjected Rep. Delbert Latta, R.-Ohio, "that the Senate made a better cut than we did." But he insisted that "I don't see how we can bring our $72 billion down to $60 billion."

Ford's goal is to hold the deficit to the $60 billion figure. But Rep. Elford Cederberg, R.-Mich., warned: "We won't even get close to your objective unless we sustain a lot of vetoes. Why should we vote for $60 billion and lose?"

Defense Secretary James Schlesinger objected to the House's proposed $9 billion military cut.

"It's so severe," he protested, "that world confidence in us goes down even more dangerously. I hope we can resist so damaging a cut."

The President, breaking in, warned that "we're going to make a strong substantive issue about their cuts. . I'll go around the country and fight like hell ... And if anyone wants to join the issue, I'll welcome it."

NAME DROPPING: Leon Jaworski, the former Watergate prosecutor, has been used unwittingly in an attempt to squelch a criminal investigation.

Jaworski's name was dropped by one of his law partners in an effort to persuade the Justice Department to halt a criminal investigtion of Ven-Fuel.

This firm, reportedly half-owned by Venezuela, has been accused of overcharging the Jacksonville, Fla., Electric Authority for fuel oil. The utility company added the estimated $26 million to its customers' bills.

As we reported last February, the Federal Energy Administration had demonstrated a strange reluctance to press criminal charges against Ven-Fuel. Investigators for Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., found that there had been a concerted campaign inside the FEA to kill the criminal case.

Orchestrating this effort were lawyers Walter Surrey and Tom McDade, the latter from the powerful Jaorski firm in Houston. The firm represents International Systems and Control, a co-owner of Ven-Fuel.

Documents subpoenaed by Moss and sworn testimony show that the two attorneys pulled strings in an attempt to stop the criminal investigtion.

"Mr. Jaworski has taken a personal interest in this case," McDade is quoted as telling assistant U.S. attorney Peter Dearing.

But Dearing stood up to the pressure and started keeping detailed memos of all his actions to insure the integrity of the investigation.

Footnote: We were unable to reach McDade, but Jaworski told us he doubted McDade would "toss around my name like that" and praised him as a ..."responsible and ethical attorney."

WALLACE'S ARMY: Alabama's Gov. George Wallace, who commands the state militia, has accumulated a "personal military staff" of about 40,000 honorary lieutenant colonels.

The appointeees, who are scattered all over the country, receive a distinctive certificate bearing the state seal and the governor's signature.

The Alabama taxpayers, of course, foot the bill for the printing and mailings. Billy Joe Camp, the governor's spokesman, said the certificates are issued under state law and generate "good will for the state of Alabama."

They also generate good will for George Wallace, who happens to be campaigning for the presidency. Camp conceded that "to say (the honorary military appointments) had no connection" with the Wallace presidential campaign "would be somewhat erroneous." But he claimed there was "no overt effort to use the awards in the campaign."

NASSIKAS MEMO: Although he is supposed to be impartial, Federal Power Chairman John Nassikas has usually smiled upon the big utility firms and frowned upon the consumers.

But in a recent memo, he surpassed himself by suggesting to his economists that they find "an expert economist" who would testify before federal agencies to support Nassikas' viesws.

The purpose would be to speed up payments to natural gas producers.

DEXTER—A movement is underway in Dexter to encourage the Board of Education to name the new junior high school in honor of Supt. Thurston S. Hill.

Petitions are being circulated and are likely to be presented at the June meeting of the Board of Education. Under state law, the naming of a public school is a matter for the school board to decide.

The plan, as outlined by the petition, calls for naming the new building the Thurston S. Hill Middle School. Naming the building for the superintendent would be in honor of his service to the community.

Mrs. Percy Clippard, one of the leaders in the petition activity, said the petitions would probably be presented to the Board of Education in time for the June meeting. Several copies of the petition are being circulated.

"We feel that it is entirely appropriate that the new building be named in honor of the man who is giving so much to the cause of good education in the community for many years," she said.

The new building is now under construction immediately south of the present high school building. The contract has been awarded and earthmoving work is now underway. The building will replace the present junior high school buildings and will probably house grades six, seven and eight, according to tentative plans.

What's the law?

The case of the confined key lifter

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Roscoe, confined to six months in the slammer, developed an immediate and negative reaction to being locked up. Consequently, he concocted a scheme for getting out.

Simply, he'd start a fight with one of the guards, "lift" his keys during the melee and then, when no one was looking, he'd nonchalantly let himself out of the clink and disappear.

Unfortunately, Roscoe discovered that there's many a cup 'twixt the lip and the slip. Almost immediately after the fight scene had concluded, the victimized guard missed his keys and the whole scenario blew sky high when the guard discovered them under Roscoe's mattress.

Charging Roscoe with robbery, the guard was indignant.

"The guy's a real bad actor," he told the judge. "He stole my keys."

"Naw, I didn't," was Roscoe's answer. "I only borrowed them. After I finished using them, he would have gotten his old keys back."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict freedom-loving Roscoe of robbery?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that robbery requires the intent to permanently deprive someone of their property. And, in this case, noted the judge, it was unlikely that Roscoe intended to permanently deprive the guard of his keys since they were of no use to Roscoe unless he intended to stay in jail which was also unlikely.

What's the law?

The case of the confined key lifter

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Roscoe, confined to six months in the slammer, developed an immediate and negative reaction to being locked up. Consequently, he concocted a scheme for getting out.

Simply, he'd start a fight with one of the guards, "lift" his keys during the melee and then, when no one was looking, he'd nonchalantly let himself out of the clink and disappear.

Unfortunately, Roscoe discovered that there's many a cup 'twixt the lip and the slip. Almost immediately after the fight scene had concluded, the victimized guard missed his keys and the whole scenario blew sky high when the guard discovered them under Roscoe's mattress.

Charging Roscoe with robbery, the guard was indignant.

"The guy's a real bad actor," he told the judge. "He stole my keys."

"Naw, I didn't," was Roscoe's answer. "I only borrowed them. After I finished using them, he would have gotten his old keys back."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict freedom-loving Roscoe of robbery?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that robbery requires the intent to permanently deprive someone of their property. And, in this case, noted the judge, it was unlikely that Roscoe intended to permanently deprive the guard of his keys since they were of no use to Roscoe unless he intended to stay in jail which was also unlikely.

TRAVELING EXHIBIT

Anyone interested in learning more about engineering and what engineers do is invited to visit a display at the Sikeston Mall in Sikeston Friday and Saturday, May 30-31. The display will be provided by the University of Missouri-Rolla.

Included in the display will be an urban vehicle designed and built by UMR students, a minicomputer which has been programmed to play a game of tic-tac-toe with the observer, a smoke-wind tunnel which shows the flow of air around different types of model cars, a hanging earth experiment and a heart valve.

Also included will be a photoelasticity device used to point out weaknesses in a given tool, a film clip of a bridge disaster, a reaction timer, a Wankel engine, a solar cell and a model of a solar heated home.

Faculty members from UMR's School of Engineering and School of Mines and Metallurgy will man the display from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. They will be available to answer questions about any of the exhibits or engineering in general.

"more spice than everything nice"

Buy it and try it

Last year baby beef was introduced in great quantities as an answer to the meat market blues. Because the meat is cheaper and has a low cholesterol level, baby beef, cut from a grass-fed animal, has become popular. However, the meat requires special cooking tips for best results.

Baby beef:

Try it, you might enjoy it

By JACKIE SCHOENEMAN
Women's Editor

Since inflation on the hoof hit hard last year, a cheaper substitute "baby beef", arrived at supermarkets.

However, consumers have not given it a fair chance--complaining of the baby beef's lack of tenderness. But with a few helpful hints, baby beef can be one good piece of meat.

According to Glenn Barks 802 Sikes Ave., a local feedlot operator, "baby beef' sold in supermarkets is a misnomer. In reality, baby beef is a grain-fed calf, weighing 600-650 pounds. What is sold in stores is meat from a grass-fed calf of between 300-350 pounds. In addition, veal, often confused with baby beef, is an unweaned calf of 125-200 pounds.

Baby beef began to flood meat counters when cattlemen paid sky-high prices for grains, such as corn and soybeans. Rather than feed expensive grain to fatten animals to achieve a heavier weight for a choice grade of meat, many farmers sold young calves for a quick turnover.

Because the calves are grass fed, their meat contains less fat-both surface fat, found on the outside of the meat found between the skin and muscle, and marbling. Marbling is fat threads found in the meat, according to Areva Abernathy, area home economist and nutrition specialist at Benton. Therefore, baby beef has less cholesterol and at one Sikeston grocery store was about 50 cents cheaper than the regular round steak.

Because baby beef has less fat, it tends to dry out if overcooked or seared, Mrs. Abernathy said. A ooist cookery is advised, When broiling, dot the meat with butter or margarine several times, she said.

Although baby beef is not expecially suited for roasting, it may be roated but at lower temperatures , such as 250 or 300 degrees, she said.

In addition to margarine, marinade sauces also can act as tenderizers. One is Sweet-Sour Marinade.

Sweet-Sour Marinade

¾ cup vinegar
1 can (6 ounce) frozen pineapple
3 Tbsp. cooking oil
½ cup brown sugar
1½ tsp. soy sauce
3 T. finely chopped green pepper
1½ tsp. salt

Combine the ingredients and simmer 15 minutes . Marinate overnight. When barbecuing, baste the meat with the sauce the last 10-15 minutes it is on the grill.

Basting sauces will keep the beef tender when grilling outside.

Mild Sauce

3 cups catsup
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 Tbsp. Worcestersire sauce
½ cup brown sugar
½ tsp. black pepper

Combine and simmer for 15 minutes.

Sauce Deluxe

1 cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup butter
¼ cup vinegar
½ cup lemon juice
2 cups catsup
½ cup finely chopped parsley
6 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 Tbsp. prepared mustard
Salt to taste (about 1½ tsp.)

Saute onions in butter and combine ingredients. Simmer 15 minutes.

Although baby beef is supposedly popular nationwide, only one of Sikeston's three largest grocery stores carries it. At that store, Larry Schoen, meat market manager, says he sells at least 3,000 poounds per week. The steaks are a deeper shade of pink, look less fatty and are smooth in texture, if the meat does not bear the needle mark of a tenderizer machine. Besides the steak, he offers boiling baby beef cut from the brisket and used for stews.

However, supermarket managers are mixed in their opinions of whether baby beef is here to stay.

One manager said the baby beef supply will be snuffed out soon with the recent trend of higher meat prices. Farmers will want to raise the higher priced, choice meat, he said.

Another said baby beef's popularity hinges on the country's economy. Because of the recession, many marginal shoppers are on welfare assistance and are able to buy baby beef with food stamps.

In addition, one manager said the beef's popularity will be an "in and out thing." Meat packers like to clear the feedlots of young calves periodicaliy, he said.

Mother buys bullets for daughter's work

WINDERMERE, Fla. (AP) — Police reservist Pam Mullins has to send her mother to buy bullets for the .38 caliber revolver she carries on patrol.

"Federal law prohibits anyone under the age of 21 from buying ammunition for a revolver," Miss Mullins, 19, said Tuesday. "So I get my mother to go to the store for me."

Police officers in this small community some 12 miles west of Orlando have to provide their own guns and ammuniction.

"We only have one gun," Police Chief Ralph Witte said. "That was left behind by a policeman who was here some years ago."

Miss Mullins said she borrowed a gun from a friend "but I've never had to use it. It is a very peaceful community and the only problems you have are with speeders."

She said her mother, Faye, was "a little alarmed when first asked to buy the bullets because she doesn't know anything about guns."

Miss Mullins took a 16-week police training course at Seminole Junior College and is now studying criminal justice. She also works as a dispatcher for the Orange County Sheriff's Department.

Miss Mullins is the only woman on the Windermere force which consists of the police chief, three patrolmen and four reservists.

Miss Mullins estimated that she fired 500 rounds of ammunition on the firing range while taking her Police Board of Standards training.

"I did well enough to qualify," she said. "I enjoy police work. I ride on patrol at night and if they have any women prisoners they'll call me out."

Witte said he can't remember when Windermere, population 983, last had a violent crime. He appointed Miss Mullins three weeks ago.

"She's been a real help to us," he said. "Everybody seems to like her, she's likeable and she's qualified."

Wheat flour is needed to leaven and hold most breads together

COLUMBIA — You cannot use just any old flour when the bread recipe calls for flour. It generally means flour made from wheat, Mrs. Treva Kintner, University of Missouri assistant foods professor, says.

Flour made from grains other than wheat can be used for variety, she says. However, some recipe adjustments must be made to get a product similar to a bread made with wheat flour. Recipes containing flour from other grains such as rice, corn, oats or rye almost always require a combination with wheat flour. The ratio varies but usually is about half and half.

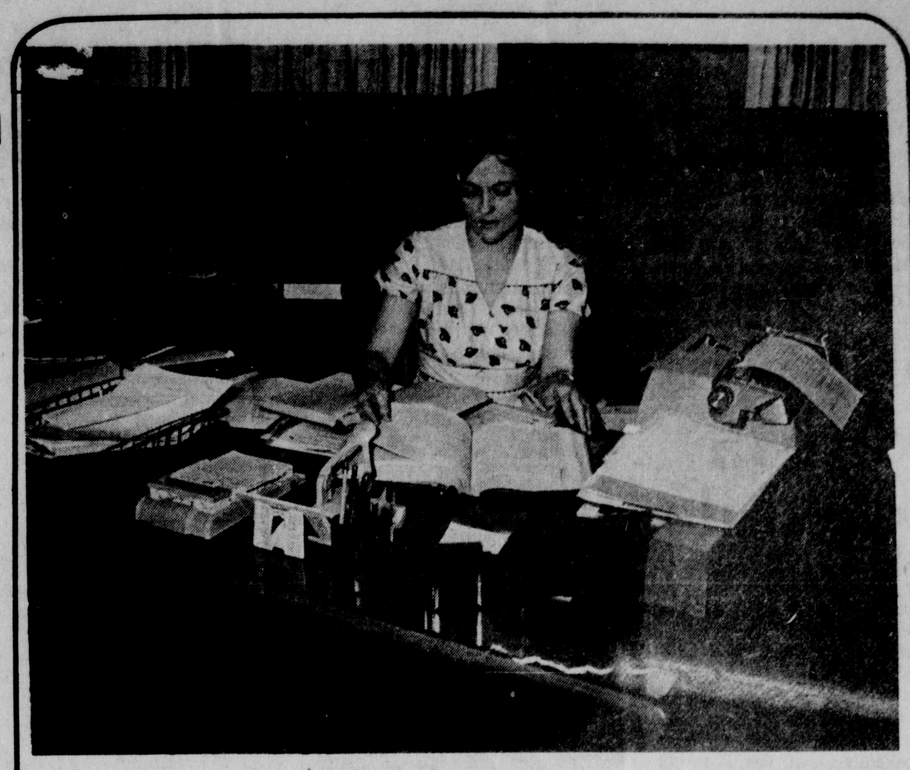
Inclusion of wheat flour is necessary to give desired structure to bread. Other types of flour lack wheat flour's strong gluten complex, the protein in flour. Gluten is necessary for the bread to leavena nd hold together. Without including wheat flour, baked products using other flours will be heavy and crumbly, Mrs. Kintner says.

Household hints

To make liver easier to grind, cook the liver on both sides in two to three tablespoons of fat for five minutes. This softens the tissues and makes grinding easier.

To judge the quality of nuts in the shell, the shell should be clean, free of cracks, scars and holes. Kernels should not rattle if shaken because this indicates dried-out kernels.

The term "corned beef" generally implies a beef brisket cured in a processing solution called a pickle. Sometimes corned beef is from the round, chuck or plate. The term "corned" comes from an early method of processing in which beef was cured by sprinkling with coarse salt grains called "corns."



Women on the go

BETTY JAYNES 28, of 403 Ruth St., breaks down complicated legal procedures "piece by piece" as part of her job as a legal secretary.

Mrs. Jaynes "fell into her job" while in high school and soon was head secreatary for a local lawyer at age 17. Here she learned how to set up such things as pleadings, contracts, wills, legal phraseology, names of clerks for different courts and the "difference between a plaintiff and a defendant."

Three and a half years ago, she switched to another law office where there are several secretaries and enjoys the job more because of the "activity and working with the people."

She can type legal proceedings as quickly as she would a standard personal letter and take dictation almost as fast as a machine would. Often there is the pressure of getting business out under deadlines but she likes it if it "does not become a personal thing."

After 11 years of experience, Mrs. Jaynes can whiz and read through such legal documents as abstracts because "everything has its logical steps and once you know that, law is easy to understand."

Along with this, she learned to be confident about the work by telling herself that was the kind of person she wanted to be. In addition, she keeps her "trap shut" about clients' personal business and feels loyalty to an employer is all important.

Work is never a bore because "it is so varied. Each case on file requires different work and must be kept up-to-date. You have to babysit the boss" with reminders of what is coming up.

Mrs. Jaynes feels marriage, work and raising chilren can work if you make time for it. Her husband, Ron, often helps by cooking evening meals. The couple have one child, Tim Heacox, 5.

Despite the lack of formal legal secretary training, Mrs. Jaynes has no doubts she has earned the title the hard way. "I've seen girls with 'education' who didn't know what end of the pencil to hold. Lawyers are not interested in you if you haven't had any legal training."

Twin sister donates foolproof kidney

HOMEWOOD, Ill. (AP) — "If it were me that needed help, Barbara would be there," says 12-year-old Carol Searing, who is about to sacrifice one of her kidneys to save her twin sister.

A circuit judge Tuesday approved the operation in which Carol will donate the kidney to her sister.

"Barbara is incredibly lucky," her father, George Searing, said in an interview. "Because she has an identical twin to donate the kidney, there is no danger that her body will reject it."

"My wife, Jean, and I were willing to donate a kidney, but the doctors said this is preferable," he said.

Barbara has been receiving dialysis treatments since April, he said, but he said these treatments would eventually begin to harm her.

A woman behind me in the supermarket checkout line last week touched my sleeve and said, "Pardon me, dearie, would you mind sucking in your stomach, you're covering part of the headline."

I inhaled so she could read "National Inquisition ..the tabloid that dared to tell the truth."

"I knew it," she mumbled. "Karl Malden Loses American Express Card In Toledo."

"I beg your pardon," I said.

"Turn that page, dearie, she said, "I want to read about Ann-Margaret Wears Supp-Hose."

"Surely you don't believe all that gossip," I said.

"Gossip! What reason would a magazine have to lie about Richard Burton pressing his trousers crooked to hid his bowlegged walk?"

"And I suppose you don't believe that your household toaster can cause learning disabilities among children."

"Oh, c'mon... how could a toaster..."

"Why, I was the first one on my block to know that the United States is phasing out commodes.

They buried that story right next to an article about, "Is Your Son Making Nerve Gas at Camp?"

"That's absurd," I laughed.

"You won't think it's absurd when you put a dime in a slot and the door opens to a missile storage room. I don't know why the press keeps all these things from us." She leaned against me and whispered , "Did you know that a woman in Guatamala gave birth to sextuplets for publicity stunt? Her husband owned a furniture store."

"A PUBLICITY STUNT!"

"I knew you'd be shocked," she smiled. "I come here for all my news. Why a week without news of the Kennedys is like a day without Anita Bryant."

"I personally feel they should leave those poor people alone."

"I should feel sorry for them," she shrugged, "I can't even get recognized by a butcher when I'm holding a low number."

While the girl was ringing up my order, a headline caught my eye. It said, "A Security Guard At La Guardia Who X-Rayed Jackie's Purse Tells All."

I slipped a copy off the newsstand and as soon as I was in the car began to read. The security guard x-rayed Jackie Schwartz's purse..a dental assistant from Pennsylvania.

Dear Ann Landers: Me write to Ann Landers? Never. But here I am. I don't know what good it will do, but maybe I'll feel better. The problem is my wife. Here's how I'd rate her:

Housekeeper--A. Cook--A. Economist--A. Lover--C-minus. The reason I don't flunk her completely is because once in awhile she does me a big favor. Usually it's when we return from a party and she's had more than her share of drinks. Then, I'd better be ready or I would never hear the end of it.

Her usual routine goes like this. After supper, in the middle of a TV program, she gets up and says, "I'm tired and I'm going to bed. When you come in, don't bother me." On weekends her best excuses are: (1) your mother may drop in; (2) the kids are due home from the movies; (3) the insurance man, paperboy or milkman is coming to collect: (4) I just had my hair done.

Dear Buff: Your letter contained an interesting clue. Booze makes your wife amorous. This means she has inhibitions about sex that undoubtedly go back to her early childhood. I suggest joint counseling. Can't hurt. Might help.

Dear Ann Landers: I must reprimand you for your crude reply to "His Widow." She wrote that her husband died suddenly, leaving her with several children to raise, and no insurance. She said he believed it made better sense to put money in the bank where it would draw interest rather than pay it out in insurance premiums. The woman was very bitter when she learned the bank balance was $5,000. If he had carried life insurance she would have collected over $50,000.

"more spice than everything nice"

Buy it and try it

Last year baby beef was introduced in great quantities as an answer to the meat market blues. Because the meat is cheaper and has a low cholesterol level, baby beef, cut from a grass-fed animal, has become popular. However, the meat requires special cooking tips for best results.

Baby beef:

Try it, you might enjoy it

By JACKIE SCHOENEMAN
Women's Editor

Since inflation on the hoof hit hard last year, a cheaper substitute "baby beef", arrived at supermarkets.

However, consumers have not given it a fair chance--complaining of the baby beef's lack of tenderness. But with a few helpful hints, baby beef can be one good piece of meat.

According to Glenn Barks 802 Sikes Ave., a local feedlot operator, "baby beef' sold in supermarkets is a misnomer. In reality, baby beef is a grain-fed calf, weighing 600-650 pounds. What is sold in stores is meat from a grass-fed calf of between 300-350 pounds. In addition, veal, often confused with baby beef, is an unweaned calf of 125-200 pounds.

Baby beef began to flood meat counters when cattlemen paid sky-high prices for grains, such as corn and soybeans. Rather than feed expensive grain to fatten animals to achieve a heavier weight for a choice grade of meat, many farmers sold young calves for a quick turnover.

Because the calves are grass fed, their meat contains less fat-both surface fat, found on the outside of the meat found between the skin and muscle, and marbling. Marbling is fat threads found in the meat, according to Areva Abernathy, area home economist and nutrition specialist at Benton. Therefore, baby beef has less cholesterol and at one Sikeston grocery store was about 50 cents cheaper than the regular round steak.

Because baby beef has less fat, it tends to dry out if overcooked or seared, Mrs. Abernathy said. A ooist cookery is advised, When broiling, dot the meat with butter or margarine several times, she said.

In addition to margarine, marinade sauces also can act as tenderizers. One is Sweet-Sour Marinade.

Sweet-Sour Marinade

¾ cup vinegar
1 can (6 ounce) frozen pineapple
3 Tbsp. cooking oil
½ cup brown sugar
1½ tsp. soy sauce
3 T. finely chopped green pepper
1½ tsp. salt

Combine the ingredients and simmer 15 minutes . Marinate overnight. When barbecuing, baste the meat with the sauce the last 10-15 minutes it is on the grill.

Basting sauces will keep the beef tender when grilling outside.

Mild Sauce

3 cups catsup
1 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 Tbsp. Worcestersire sauce
½ cup brown sugar
½ tsp. black pepper

Combine and simmer for 15 minutes.

Sauce Deluxe

1 cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup butter
¼ cup vinegar
½ cup lemon juice
2 cups catsup
½ cup finely chopped parsley
6 Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 Tbsp. prepared mustard
Salt to taste (about 1½ tsp.)

Saute onions in butter and combine ingredients. Simmer 15 minutes.

Although baby beef is supposedly popular nationwide, only one of Sikeston's three largest grocery stores carries it. At that store, Larry Schoen, meat market manager, says he sells at least 3,000 poounds per week. The steaks are a deeper shade of pink, look less fatty and are smooth in texture, if the meat does not bear the needle mark of a tenderizer machine. Besides the steak, he offers boiling baby beef cut from the brisket and used for stews.

However, supermarket managers are mixed in their opinions of whether baby beef is here to stay.

One manager said the baby beef supply will be snuffed out soon with the recent trend of higher meat prices. Farmers will want to raise the higher priced, choice meat, he said.

Another said baby beef's popularity hinges on the country's economy. Because of the recession, many marginal shoppers are on welfare assistance and are able to buy baby beef with food stamps.

In addition, one manager said the beef's popularity will be an "in and out thing." Meat packers like to clear the feedlots of young calves periodically, he said.

Mother buys bullets for daughter's work

WINDERMERE, Fla. (AP) — Police reservist Pam Mullins has to send her mother to buy bullets for the .38 caliber revolver she carries on patrol.

"Federal law prohibits anyone under the age of 21 from buying ammunition for a revolver," Miss Mullins, 19, said Tuesday. "So I get my mother to go to the store for me."

Police officers in this small community some 12 miles west of Orlando have to provide their own guns and ammuniction.

"We only have one gun," Police Chief Ralph Witte said. "That was left behind by a policeman who was here some years ago."

Miss Mullins said she borrowed a gun from a friend "but I've never had to use it. It is a very peaceful community and the only problems you have are with speeders."

She said her mother, Faye, was "a little alarmed when first asked to buy the bullets because she doesn't know anything about guns."

Miss Mullins took a 16-week police training course at Seminole Junior College and is now studying criminal justice. She also works as a dispatcher for the Orange County Sheriff's Department.

Miss Mullins is the only woman on the Windermere force which consists of the police chief, three patrolmen and four reservists.

Miss Mullins estimated that she fired 500 rounds of ammunition on the firing range while taking her Police Board of Standards training.

"I did well enough to qualify," she said. "I enjoy police work. I ride on patrol at night and if they have any women prisoners they'll call me out."

Witte said he can't remember when Windermere, population 983, last had a violent crime. He appointed Miss Mullins three weeks ago.

"She's been a real help to us," he said. "Everybody seems to like her, she's likeable and she's qualified."

Roger Staubach, Dallas Cowboys quarterback, and Paul Anderson, Olympic and world weightlifting champion, were among those saluted at the Fellowship of Christian Athletes' recent National Recognition Banquet here.

Over 1,000 attended the sixth annual occasion to recognize worthy recipients for their involvement in the 20-year-old FCA movement. Staubach received the FCA's Pro Athlete Award and Anderson was presented the Branch Rickey Memorial Award--in honor of the immortal baseball figure who was integral in helping launch the FCA in 1955.

Other honorees were Baylor University quarterback Neal Jeffrey, Illinois quarterback Jeff Hollenbach, Colorado University freshman football coach Dan Stavely, and Waseca (Minn.) High School three-sport star Gene Glynn.

Staubach has been an active FCA participant since joining the Cowboys in 1969 as a 27-year-old rookie. Previously he'd won the Heisman Trophy his junior year at Navy, then served a four-year hitch after graduation. When Dallas faltered early in the '71 season, Coach Tom Landry named Staubach his No. 1 quarterback and Roger responded by leading the Cowboys to ten straight wins. The Cowboys trounced Miami, 24-3, in Super Bowl VI and Staubach was voted Most Valuable player. Staubach has shared his Christian faith at numerous FCA breakfasts, rallies, banquets and other events and attended national summer conferences.

Anderson has participated at dozens of FCA functions in the last decade and is currently a member of FCA's National Board of Trustees. At 23 he had shattered every existing heavyweight weightlifting record in the world, including triumphs over the Russians and at the '56 Olympics at Melbourne, Australia. In 1957 in his native Toccoa, Ga., Anderson backlifted an unprecedented 6,270 pounds and was labeled "the world's strongest man"--a title that still endures in The Guinness Book of World Records. Anderson, 43, continues to train today and make up to 500 appearances annually to support his youth homes in Vidalia, Ga., and Dallas.

Last fall Neal Jeffrey quarterbacked Baylor to its first Southwest Conference title and Cotton Bowl berth in 50 years, and Jeff Hollenbach passed Illinois to its first winning season since 1965. Co-recipients of FCA's College Athlete Award, both are captains of the FCA Fellowship groups on their campuses and have served on FCA's College Staff at national summer conferences.

Sports Corner

Ron Jaynes

Stavely has been the popular Colorado frosh football coach since 1963 and has a wide reputation for his outstanding handling of players both on the field and in the classroom. He is also Assistant Athletic Director at CU, sponsor of the FCA Fellowship group and a familiar figure at FCA National Conferences and activities throughout Colorado.

Award presentors and banquet participants included Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry, Chairman of FCA's National Board of Trustees, Baltimore Oriole third base great Brooks Robinson, Olympic gold and silver medalist Madeline Manning Jackson, former Harlem Globetrotter Bob Williams and ex-Baltimore Colt fullback Alan Ameche.

The National Recognition Banquet kicked off FCA's 28 National Conference weeks this summer involving 10,000 athletes, coaches and family members. Year-round activities of the FCA include NCAA and NAIA coaches meetings, pro chapel services, bowl breakfasts, and athletes and coaches meeting in over 1,850 high school Huddles and college Fellowships from coast to coast.

Purpose of the FCA is "to confront athletes and coaches, and through them the youth of the nation, with the challenge and adventure of accepting Jesus Christ as Savior, participating in His Church and serving Him through our vocations."

AUTO RACING

Bill "Grumpy" Jenkins, the winningest competitor in Pro Stock history, with 16 major National event wins, has entered his popular Chevy Vega in the upcoming AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" Championship Drag Races, slated for May 30-June 1, at St. Louis International Raceway.

The 20-year veteran from Malvern, Pennsylvania, seldom competes in the Mid-West and South Central United States, because it conflicts with his extensive match race program on the East Coast, which finds him running at anywhere from 2 to 4 separate drag strips during each week of the season; however, the prestige of the AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" finds the popular Jenkins revising his schedule so his record holding Chevrolet-Vega Pro Stocker can compete at St. Louis.

Jenkins has proven his true genius by expanding his ventures into Nascar Grand National Stock Car Racing. Donnie Allison, currently campaigning a Jenkins small-block powerplant, recently won the pole at Daytona, and is one of the top threats in the Grand National title chase.

Jenkins is a graduate engineer via, Cornell University, and probably the finest testimonial to his talents rest in the fact that the AHRA Pro Stock rules find the "small block" Chevy powered cars forced to give a handicap to the "big block" Chevy competitors. This ruling is pointed directly at Jenkins' superiority.

"Grumpy" as he is known, draws guarantees and appearance money surpassing every other Pro in drag racing...including Don "Big Daddy" Garlits. It is not uncommon for Jenkins to draw $3,000 for a single 3-run match race appearance. In fact, he has an upcoming date on the West Coast which will pay a guaranteed $10,000.00 for his appearance.

Hot off his recent win at Dragway 42, West Salem, Ohio, Jenkins is the AHRA Pro Stock Grand American Series Points leader with a total of 3600 Points, an 1100 point lead over Larry Huff with 2500. As always Jenkins will be out to prove his Vega is still the car to beat in Pro Stock when the AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" comes to St. Louis International Raceway, May 30-June 1.

St. Louis International Raceway is located at the Intersection of Int.-70 and Route 203, on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River, just four miles from downtown St. Louis.

WFL offers debt payment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Creditors of the old World Football League have been offered a settlement on outstanding debts that will pay them 1½ per cent of the new league's gross revenues for the next 12 years.

WFL President Chris Hemmeter, in a telephone interview from his New York office, said Thursday the offer was made to creditors even though the new league has no legal responsibility to pay off such outstanding debts.

However, the new league is on more firm financial ground than was the WFL of 1974, he said, and "our plan is to pay off the debts of the old league. The only reason we made this offer was to create an environment in which a new league can survive.

"We don't have any legal responsibility to those creditors," Hemmeter said. " We don't have to offer them anything but we feel that to develop this league in the future ... we might have a credibility problem."

Hemmeter said the plan is based on financial projections that he termed "conservative but realistic." He said the league would have "a weighted average of 16 teams with a weighted average of $4 million per team over the next 12 years. That means there would be a total of $64 million in revenues and at 1½ per cent per year, that is payment of $960,000 a year. Now, over 12 years, that is payment of nearly $12 million and that exceeds substantially the outstanding obligations to creditors. Payments would be terminated in 12 years."

Hemmeter explained that the old WFL no longer exists. "We simply bought the name from them. We knew there were some severe financial problems ... but this league is technically called The New League, Inc., a Pensylvania corporation."

He admitted that for the league to grow a national television contract is mandatory and "we're certainly spending a great deal of time on that and we hope to have a very good one this year." He said although the league should survive at least three years "we need the exposure of television if we are to grow. We need a showcase, where we can expose our product on a national basis."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Binford, president of Arena Sports Inc., which owns the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association, has assumed the additional duties of team general manager.

He replaces John Weissert, who has been Pacer general manager for five years.

Binford also announced that Indianapolis attorney James F. Bindley has been named a full-tiime assistant to the president of Arena Sports.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Thunder of the World Football League signed two offensive tackles Thursday, both veterans of the defunct Portland Storm of the WFL.

They were Mike Askea, a 6-foot-4, 265-pound Stanford graduate, and Buzz Brazeau, a 6-4, 260-pound product of Washington State.

BOWLING

DOWNEY, Calif. — Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., won seven of eight match games to move into a 42-pin lead in the PBA National Championship with an 8,922 total pinfall for 40 games.

Roger Staubach, Dallas Cowboys quarterback, and Paul Anderson, Olympic and world weightlifting champion, were among those saluted at the Fellowship of Christian Athletes' recent National Recognition Banquet here.

Over 1,000 attended the sixth annual occasion to recognize worthy recipients for their involvement in the 20-year-old FCA movement. Staubach received the FCA's Pro Athlete Award and Anderson was presented the Branch Rickey Memorial Award--in honor of the immortal baseball figure who was integral in helping launch the FCA in 1955.

Other honorees were Baylor University quarterback Neal Jeffrey, Illinois quarterback Jeff Hollenbach, Colorado University freshman football coach Dan Stavely, and Waseca (Minn.) High School three-sport star Gene Glynn.

Staubach has been an active FCA participant since joining the Cowboys in 1969 as a 27-year-old rookie. Previously he'd won the Heisman Trophy his junior year at Navy, then served a four-year hitch after graduation. When Dallas faltered early in the '71 season, Coach Tom Landry named Staubach his No. 1 quarterback and Roger responded by leading the Cowboys to ten straight wins. The Cowboys trounced Miami, 24-3, in Super Bowl VI and Staubach was voted Most Valuable player. Staubach has shared his Christian faith at numerous FCA breakfasts, rallies, banquets and other events and attended national summer conferences.

Anderson has participated at dozens of FCA functions in the last decade and is currently a member of FCA's National Board of Trustees. At 23 he had shattered every existing heavyweight weightlifting record in the world, including triumphs over the Russians and at the '56 Olympics at Melbourne, Australia. In 1957 in his native Toccoa, Ga., Anderson backlifted an unprecedented 6,270 pounds and was labeled "the world's strongest man"--a title that still endures in The Guinness Book of World Records. Anderson, 43, continues to train today and make up to 500 appearances annually to support his youth homes in Vidalia, Ga., and Dallas.

Last fall Neal Jeffrey quarterbacked Baylor to its first Southwest Conference title and Cotton Bowl berth in 50 years, and Jeff Hollenbach passed Illinois to its first winning season since 1965. Co-recipients of FCA's College Athlete Award, both are captains of the FCA Fellowship groups on their campuses and have served on FCA's College Staff at national summer conferences.

Sports Corner

Ron Jaynes

Stavely has been the popular Colorado frosh football coach since 1963 and has a wide reputation for his outstanding handling of players both on the field and in the classroom. He is also Assistant Athletic Director at CU, sponsor of the FCA Fellowship group and a familiar figure at FCA National Conferences and activities throughout Colorado.

Award presentors and banquet participants included Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry, Chairman of FCA's National Board of Trustees, Baltimore Oriole third base great Brooks Robinson, Olympic gold and silver medalist Madeline Manning Jackson, former Harlem Globetrotter Bob Williams and ex-Baltimore Colt fullback Alan Ameche.

The National Recognition Banquet kicked off FCA's 28 National Conference weeks this summer involving 10,000 athletes, coaches and family members. Year-round activities of the FCA include NCAA and NAIA coaches meetings, pro chapel services, bowl breakfasts, and athletes and coaches meeting in over 1,850 high school Huddles and college Fellowships from coast to coast.

Purpose of the FCA is "to confront athletes and coaches, and through them the youth of the nation, with the challenge and adventure of accepting Jesus Christ as Savior, participating in His Church and serving Him through our vocations."

AUTO RACING

Bill "Grumpy" Jenkins, the winningest competitor in Pro Stock history, with 16 major National event wins, has entered his popular Chevy Vega in the upcoming AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" Championship Drag Races, slated for May 30-June 1, at St. Louis International Raceway.

The 20-year veteran from Malvern, Pennsylvania, seldom competes in the Mid-West and South Central United States, because it conflicts with his extensive match race program on the East Coast, which finds him running at anywhere from 2 to 4 separate drag strips during each week of the season; however, the prestige of the AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" finds the popular Jenkins revising his schedule so his record holding Chevrolet-Vega Pro Stocker can compete at St. Louis.

Jenkins has proven his true genius by expanding his ventures into Nascar Grand National Stock Car Racing. Donnie Allison, currently campaigning a Jenkins small-block powerplant, recently won the pole at Daytona, and is one of the top threats in the Grand National title chase.

Jenkins is a graduate engineer via, Cornell University, and probably the finest testimonial to his talents rest in the fact that the AHRA Pro Stock rules find the "small block" Chevy powered cars forced to give a handicap to the "big block" Chevy competitors. This ruling is pointed directly at Jenkins' superiority.

"Grumpy" as he is known, draws guarantees and appearance money surpassing every other Pro in drag racing...including Don "Big Daddy" Garlits. It is not uncommon for Jenkins to draw $3,000 for a single 3-run match race appearance. In fact, he has an upcoming date on the West Coast which will pay a guaranteed $10,000.00 for his appearance.

Hot off his recent win at Dragway 42, West Salem, Ohio, Jenkins is the AHRA Pro Stock Grand American Series Points leader with a total of 3600 Points, an 1100 point lead over Larry Huff with 2500. As always Jenkins will be out to prove his Vega is still the car to beat in Pro Stock when the AHRA "SPRING NATIONALS" comes to St. Louis International Raceway, May 30-June 1.

St. Louis International Raceway is located at the Intersection of Int.-70 and Route 203, on the Illinois side of the Mississippi River, just four miles from downtown St. Louis.

WFL offers debt payment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Creditors of the old World Football League have been offered a settlement on outstanding debts that will pay them 1½ per cent of the new league's gross revenues for the next 12 years.

WFL President Chris Hemmeter, in a telephone interview from his New York office, said Thursday the offer was made to creditors even though the new league has no legal responsibility to pay off such outstanding debts.

However, the new league is on more firm financial ground than was the WFL of 1974, he said, and "our plan is to pay off the debts of the old league. The only reason we made this offer was to create an environment in which a new league can survive.

"We don't have any legal responsibility to those creditors," Hemmeter said. " We don't have to offer them anything but we feel that to develop this league in the future ... we might have a credibility problem."

Hemmeter said the plan is based on financial projections that he termed "conservative but realistic." He said the league would have "a weighted average of 16 teams with a weighted average of $4 million per team over the next 12 years. That means there would be a total of $64 million in revenues and at 1½ per cent per year, that is payment of $960,000 a year. Now, over 12 years, that is payment of nearly $12 million and that exceeds substantially the outstanding obligations to creditors. Payments would be terminated in 12 years."

Hemmeter explained that the old WFL no longer exists. "We simply bought the name from them. We knew there were some severe financial problems ... but this league is technically called The New League, Inc., a Pensylvania corporation."

He admitted that for the league to grow a national television contract is mandatory and "we're certainly spending a great deal of time on that and we hope to have a very good one this year." He said although the league should survive at least three years "we need the exposure of television if we are to grow. We need a showcase, where we can expose our product on a national basis."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Binford, president of Arena Sports Inc., which owns the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association, has assumed the additional duties of team general manager.

He replaces John Weissert, who has been Pacer general manager for five years.

Binford also announced that Indianapolis attorney James F. Bindley has been named a full-tiime assistant to the president of Arena Sports.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Thunder of the World Football League signed two offensive tackles Thursday, both veterans of the defunct Portland Storm of the WFL.

They were Mike Askea, a 6-foot-4, 265-pound Stanford graduate, and Buzz Brazeau, a 6-4, 260-pound product of Washington State.

BOWLING

DOWNEY, Calif. — Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., won seven of eight match games to move into a 42-pin lead in the PBA National Championship with an 8,922 total pinfall for 40 games.

College singers to give concert

The Lordsmen Plus, a musical group of students studying at Anderson (Ind.) College will present a sacred concert at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Tanner Street Church of God, 619 Tanner St., according to the Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, pastor.

The Lordsmen Plus, consisting of four young men and two young ladies of varied talents and vocational aims, are touring extensive ly this summer throughout the Midwestern and Southeastern states.

In the group are Mike Ayers of Frederic, Mich., a junior computer science major; Mark DeFazio of Niagara Falls, N.Y., junior religion major; John Sandy of Nitro, W. Va., junior commercial art major; Bill Cornell, a second-year seminarian in Anderson School of Theology; and the Plus, which refers to the two young ladies, Sharon Doverspike of Apolla, Pa., an elementary education major, and Jo Ann Keibler of South Shore, Ky., who joined the cast May 19.

Ayers plays bass guitar and operates the sound. DeFazio plays the piano and sings a little. Sandy is the bass singer, while Miss Doverspike is the soprano, Cornell the tenor and Miss Keibler the alto.

The group's repertoire ranges from old-style gospel quartet to contemporary gospel numbers.

Revival series set next week at Diehlstadt

DIEHLSTADT — Revival services will begin Monday and continue at 7:30 nightly through June 8 at the Diehlstadt General Baptist Church.

The Rev. Raymond Hannah of East Prairie will be the guest speaker. The pastor is the Rev. Ralph Marshall.

Old Bethel church enters new building

Old Bethel (Silent Hill) Baptist Church, located off Route H four miles north of Miner, celebrated completion of a new sanctuary by holding its annual homecoming event as the first service in it last Sunday, then beginning revival services Monday night.

The Rev. Bob Ethridge of Bloomfield was guest speaker for the homecoming service Sunday, and special music was provided by the Gospel Messengers, a gospel singing group composed of members of the church.

The evangelist for the revival services, being conducted nightly through Sunday, is the Rev. Amos Johnson Jr., pastor of First Baptist Church in Crestn, Ill., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Johnson Sr. of Sikeston Route Two.

Special music also is being provided for the revival services by the Gospel Messengers. The group is composed of Danny Arwood of Morley and Geneva Jones, Linda McClain, Joyce Hampton and Glenda Robison of Sikeston Route Two.

The pastor is the Rev. Joe Skinner.

Murray Lane VBS set

Vacation Bible School will begin Monday and continue through June 13 at Murray Lane Baptist Church, 807 W. Murray Lane, according to the Rev. Wade Paris, pastor.

Classes will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday of both weeks for children 3 years old through fifth grade, and a teen college will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. the same days for sixth through 12th graders.

Bible study and Christian-related activities will be geared to each age group, and teen-agers will be given a choice of classes using different teaching methods and faculty members on different nights.

Group to sing for hearing and deaf

The Signs of Love singers, a group of young people from Christ for the Nations Institute in Dallas, Tex., will appear at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St., at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The singers sing with their voices for hearing people and in the language of signs for deaf people. The group is composed of nine female and five male members, including two deaf students from Colombia, South America. In addition to ministering to the deaf themselves, the main objective of the choir is to inform Christian people of the need for gospel workers among the deaf. The church nursery will be open for children 3 years old and under.

What do you say to a hungry world

By David Poling

The collapse of the old regimes and the emergence of new in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam has sent millions of refugees surging across the landscape of Southeast Asia. The crumbling and caving in of an old order has affected jarring social change. Whatever side is yours, whatever loyalty you espouse, the result is the same — sickness, hunger, and death. Most of these people are the residential victims of war. When ideology fades and the flags are put away, orphans and widows remain.

In the far, remote regions of these kingdoms of tragedy, organizations like World Vision continue to operate. Much of their present effort is being given to lifting the ethical and moral sensitivity of citizens in the Western world — the U.S. in particular. It is a worthy and demanding chore. Hunger continues to sweep across religious, political and ethnic lines. It cuts down the reactionary right and the revolutionary left. The peasant hovel and the royal palace share the same dreaded turf — starvation for millions.

Says Stan Mooneyham, president of World Vision and its leading spokesman on hunger, "We are not interested in politics. Governments and empires change. Hunger remains, famine hovers over millions. In the new nations of Asia and the other countries of the Third World, hunger is a permanent resident".

Currently World Vision is using its skill in working with a powerful coalition of religious and humanitarian groups. Feeding the hungry and promoting family planning is the center of this organization's efforts.

World Vision has just produced a five-hour television special dealing with the theme, What Do You Say To a Hungry World? (This is the same title for the new book by Dr. Mooneyham, published by Word.) Here the global problems of famine and starvation are portrayed as well as the response of religious and secular groups to meet that challenge. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish units of relief and assistance have shown remarkable planning and strategy.

In West Africa, World Vision, with a grant from the Lilly Foundation, has pioneered some agricultural-irrigation projects to bring to harvest food supplies in formerly unproductive areas of Niger. The viewers of this special (and the readers of this column) are invited to request the new poster on hunger, prepared by Corita, the famous graphic artist. It is available at World Vision, Box O, Pasadena, Calif., 91109.

Something else to ponder: the intriguing way that independent religious organizations exhort, needle and influence the mainline denominations to get going in humanitarian projects. Great bodies move slowly and great religious bodies often move with the pace of a geriatric ox. It is nothing less than exciting to see the mobility and zeal of Christian groups that work with and often beyond, the comfortable clan in the pew. They have something to say to a hungry world.

St. Louis man heads CCF service agency

ST. LOUIS — J. Clinton Hawkins of St. Louis, a retired business executive and nationally prominent Young Men's Christian Association leader, was elected President of the board of directors of Christian Civic Foundation, Inc. at its annual meeting in Columbia, succeeding Dr. Paul E. White of Maryville.

Christian Civic Foundation, headquartered in St. Louis, is an inter-denominational service agency that presents an alcohol and drug education program in more than 400 Missouri schools annually, according to Dr. C. R. Horne, executive director.

The organization's work was commended by the State Department of Mental Health in its 1973 State Plan on Alcohol Abuse, which said of the foundation, "They appear to be the only organization which can set up programs which turn students on without offending or threatening teachers, parents or school administration."

Hawkins has received two honorary degrees and was named Lay Churchman of the Year by Religious Heritage, Inc. in 1967. He is currently executive director of the Missouri United Methodist Foundation, Inc. in St. Louis.

Memphis couple to speak Sunday at New Madrid

NEW MADRID — Trinity Charismatic Church will have Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely of Memphis, Tenn., as guest speakers for the 7 p.m. service Sunday, according to the Rev. Larry McClarty, pastor.

Ely is an attorney and has been very active in civic and political affairs at Memphis. He has served as president of the Shelby County Civic Clubs and his law partner is the present mayor of Memphis.

Ely has received many awards in his community and is a member of the United Methodist Church.

The Trinity congregation meets at the Community Building on Mill Street.

Dexter minister speaks tonight at Mount Olive

LILBOURN — The Rev. O. M. Montgomery of Dexter will be the guest speaker at a special service in Mount Olive National Baptist Church tonight at 7:30, the Rev. Garfery Wilson, pastor, has announced.

The Rev. Mr. Montgomery, who has been a preacher for 50 years, started when he was 15 years old and has preached in crusades and revivals all over America.

The Prayer

"Do not neglect the spiritual gift that is in you." (1 Timothy 4:11-16)

PRAYER: Father, we offer You our lives to be consecreated in Your service. Amen.

Children's home festival planned

BRIDGETON — The campus of Missouri Baptist Children's Home will be the scene for the 84th time as Baptists of Missouri gather for a day-long Strawberry Festival on June 7.

Starting at 9:30 a.m., the first buses and carloads of faithful supporters of Baptist child care work in Missouri will arrive.

From that moment until 5 p.m., between 3,000 and 5,000 people will assemble to renew acquaintences, hear gospel music, rummage through tables laden with art needlework and other crafts and feast on homemade cake, ice cream and strawberries.

The festival this year will be the first under the leadership of Howard L. Meyer, new administrator of the home.

The speaker at the afternoon session will be Dr. Rhuebin L. South, executive director of the Missouri Baptist Convention. Also, two piano and organ concerts will be featured in the new sanctuary of Fee Fee Baptist Church, located adjacent to the children's home campus, by Tedd Smith, pianist, and Don Hustad, organist, with the Billy Graham evangelistic team. Various church music groups will also sing during the day.

The purpose of the annual Strawberry Festival is to provide Baptists from all over the state a first-hand view of their child care program amid the experience of "old-fashined" picnic-on-the-grounds Christian fellowship from a bygone era.

The home is located at 11300 St. Charles Rock Road in Bridgeton.

St. Louis group featured in 2 singing events

The Scott County Singing Convention will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday in Little Vine General Baptist Church, located southeast of town on Route AA.

The King James Version, a quartet from St. Louis, will be featured on the program with local area singers.

The St. Louis singing group also will present a singing program at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Smith Street Church of God, 420 Smith St.

Church to host bean supper and youth choir

CANALOU — The youth department will host a ham and bean supper Saturday and the youth choir from First Baptist Church in Gideon will be featured guests for the Sunday evening service at First Baptist Church here, according to the Rev. Fred Ritter, pastor.

The supper will be served from 4 to 8 p.m. Saturday in the church cafeteria, and tickets may be purchased at the door. The proceeds will be used to help pay expenses for a youth trip this summer.

The youth choir from Gideon is directed by Larry McCann. The service will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Religion changes life of country singer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Religion, in one form or another, has always been a prime force in country music. Traditionally, however, country gospel entertainers have wanted to sing about their God.

But not Connie Smith.

"I was saved seven years ago, but I still sing the same type of country songs I always have," says the 33-year-old blonde.

"Sometimes I turn down a good song that gives too much glory to man. But most songs I sing, especially love songs, are about the Lord anyway, because I feel the love of God in everything."

When Bill Anderson brought Miss Smith to Nashville from Ohio in 1964, she was one of country music's Cinderella figures. Shortly after signing her first recording contract, her first single, "Once a Day" jumped to the top of the charts.

But for the naive newcomer to country music, Nashville was almost too much to handle.

"In a few years I had gone through my second divorce, was $75,000 in debt, had four lawsuits against me and was seeing a psychiatrist," she recalls. "That's as close to the bottom as I'd ever want to go.

"I was ignorant and too immature to face reality."

A performance on the WSM Gospel Show hosted by Rev. Jimmy Rogers Snow, son of Hank Snow, was the beginning of Miss Smith's conversion as what she calls a "born-again Christian."

"Rev. Snow saw that I needed to be saved and showed me the way. It was a soul searching time. I thought 'I can't do it alone, I can't raise two boys without a daddy.'

"But I began to be rebuilt and the changes were good. I married a fine, Christian husband who sought me out and who is constantly trying to make me happy. We have a loving, Christian home."

Miss Smith's two sons, by earlier marriages, are Kerry, 6, and Darren, 12. Her daughter, Julie Rae, 13 months, is the first child of her marriage to Marshall Haynes. A second is expected in April.

Family life and new-found Christianity have not kept Connie Smith from her career. She records about four albums a year for Columbia Records. Her single "I've Got My Baby on My Mind," is currently in the top 15 on the country music charts.

"I still love to sing and I love country music. Only now I don't seek a hit. I'm more interested in my family and not anxious about how my records do.

"Of course, I like success and I really appreciate it when a song does well."

The change in Miss Smith brought about a change in her attitude toward Nashville's music industry.

"When I started having troubles, I was bitter toward the industry for some time," she remembers. "Before I got saved, I was blaming it (the music business) for my unhappiness.

"But the Lord made me realize it was me and not the music people. This made me love the industry with a foundation and not as a fantasy that went wrong." v

Miss Smith likened her past in country music to that of another Cinderella figure, Jeannie C. Riley, who burst into the limelight with "Harper Valley PTA."

"Jeannie's highs have been higher and probably her lows lower," says Miss Smith. "But I was probably more immature even though I was older when I first had success."

Like her predecesor Miss Riley is an evangelical, new-found Christian. Both women attend the same church, as does another country music singer, Skeeter Davis.

"It can really be hard for a girl to break into country music. This can be a fierce town.m

"But every country girl singer that has made it has been a lady and has the respect of the men they work with. Look at Loretta Lynn, Dolly Parton or Tammy Wynette.

"The only advice I would give a girl singer coming to Nashville is not to sing a song that another girl sings. If you do there is an immediate comparison between you and her.

"Loretta gave me this advice when I first came to Nashville, and she said Patsy Cline had given it to her when she first came to town.

College singers to give concert

The Lordsmen Plus, a musical group of students studying at Anderson (Ind.) College will present a sacred concert at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Tanner Street Church of God, 619 Tanner St., according to the Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, pastor.

The Lordsmen Plus, consisting of four young men and two young ladies of varied talents and vocational aims, are touring extensive ly this summer throughout the Midwestern and Southeastern states.

In the group are Mike Ayers of Frederic, Mich., a junior computer science major; Mark DeFazio of Niagara Falls, N.Y., junior religion major; John Sandy of Nitro, W. Va., junior commercial art major; Bill Cornell, a second-year seminarian in Anderson School of Theology; and the Plus, which refers to the two young ladies, Sharon Doverspike of Apolla, Pa., an elementary education major, and Jo Ann Keibler of South Shore, Ky., who joined the cast May 19.

Ayers plays bass guitar and operates the sound. DeFazio plays the piano and sings a little. Sandy is the bass singer, while Miss Doverspike is the soprano, Cornell the tenor and Miss Keibler the alto.

The group's repertoire ranges from old-style gospel quartet to contemporary gospel numbers.

Revival series set next week at Diehlstadt

DIEHLSTADT — Revival services will begin Monday and continue at 7:30 nightly through June 8 at the Diehlstadt General Baptist Church.

The Rev. Raymond Hannah of East Prairie will be the guest speaker. The pastor is the Rev. Ralph Marshall.

Old Bethel church enters new building

Old Bethel (Silent Hill) Baptist Church, located off Route H four miles north of Miner, celebrated completion of a new sanctuary by holding its annual homecoming event as the first service in it last Sunday, then beginning revival services Monday night.

The Rev. Bob Ethridge of Bloomfield was guest speaker for the homecoming service Sunday, and special music was provided by the Gospel Messengers, a gospel singing group composed of members of the church.

The evangelist for the revival services, being conducted nightly through Sunday, is the Rev. Amos Johnson Jr., pastor of First Baptist Church in Crestn, Ill., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Johnson Sr. of Sikeston Route Two.

Special music also is being provided for the revival services by the Gospel Messengers. The group is composed of Danny Arwood of Morley and Geneva Jones, Linda McClain, Joyce Hampton and Glenda Robison of Sikeston Route Two.

The pastor is the Rev. Joe Skinner.

Murray Lane VBS set

Vacation Bible School will begin Monday and continue through June 13 at Murray Lane Baptist Church, 807 W. Murray Lane, according to the Rev. Wade Paris, pastor.

Classes will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday of both weeks for children 3 years old through fifth grade, and a teen college will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. the same days for sixth through 12th graders.

Bible study and Christian-related activities will be geared to each age group, and teenagers will be given a choice of classes using different teaching methods and faculty members on different nights.

Group to sing for hearing and deaf

The Signs of Love singers, a group of young people from Christ for the Nations Institute in Dallas, Tex., will appear at Calvary Assembly Church, 127 W. Trotter St., at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The singers sing with their voices for hearing people and in the language of signs for deaf people. The group is composed of nine female and five male members, including two deaf students from Colombia, South America. In addition to ministering to the deaf themselves, the main objective of the choir is to inform Christian people of the need for gospel workers among the deaf. The church nursery will be open for children 3 years old and under.

What do you say to a hungry world

By David Poling

The collapse of the old regimes and the emergence of new in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam has sent millions of refugees surging across the landscape of Southeast Asia. The crumbling and caving in of an old order has affected jarring social change. Whatever side is yours, whatever loyalty you espouse, the result is the same — sickness, hunger, and death. Most of these people are the residential victims of war. When ideology fades and the flags are put away, orphans and widows remain.

In the far, remote regions of these kingdoms of tragedy, organizations like World Vision continue to operate. Much of their present effort is being given to lifting the ethical and moral sensitivity of citizens in the Western world — the U.S. in particular. It is a worthy and demanding chore. Hunger continues to sweep across religious, political and ethnic lines. It cuts down the reactionary right and the revolutionary left. The peasant hovel and the royal palace share the same dreaded turf — starvation for millions.

Says Stan Mooneyham, president of World Vision and its leading spokesman on hunger, "We are not interested in politics. Governments and empires change. Hunger remains, famine hovers over millions. In the new nations of Asia and the other countries of the Third World, hunger is a permanent resident".

Currently World Vision is using its skill in working with a powerful coalition of religious and humanitarian groups. Feeding the hungry and promoting family planning is the center of this organization's efforts.

World Vision has just produced a five-hour television special dealing with the theme, What Do You Say To a Hungry World? (This is the same title for the new book by Dr. Mooneyham, published by Word.) Here the global problems of famine and starvation are portrayed as well as the response of religious and secular groups to meet that challenge. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish units of relief and assistance have shown remarkable planning and strategy.

In West Africa, World Vision, with a grant from the Lilly Foundation, has pioneered some agricultural-irrigation projects to bring to harvest food supplies in formerly unproductive areas of Niger. The viewers of this special (and the readers of this column) are invited to request the new poster on hunger, prepared by Corita, the famous graphic artist. It is available at World Vision, Box O, Pasadena, Calif., 91109.

Something else to ponder: the intriguing way that independent religious organizations exhort, needle and influence the mainline denominations to get going in humanitarian projects. Great bodies move slowly and great religious bodies often move with the pace of a geriatric ox. It is nothing less than exciting to see the mobility and zeal of Christian groups that work with and often beyond, the comfortable clan in the pew. They have something to say to a hungry world.

St. Louis man heads CCF service agency

ST. LOUIS — J. Clinton Hawkins of St. Louis, a retired business executive and nationally prominent Young Men's Christian Association leader, was elected President of the board of directors of Christian Civic Foundation, Inc. at its annual meeting in Columbia, succeeding Dr. Paul E. White of Maryville.

Christian Civic Foundation, headquartered in St. Louis, is an inter-denominational service agency that presents an alcohol and drug education program in more than 400 Missouri schools annually, according to Dr. C. R. Horne, executive director.

The organization's work was commended by the State Department of Mental Health in its 1973 State Plan on Alcohol Abuse, which said of the foundation, "They appear to be the only organization which can set up programs which turn students on without offending or threatening teachers, parents or school administration."

Hawkins has received two honorary degrees and was named Lay Churchman of the Year by Religious Heritage, Inc. in 1967. He is currently executive director of the Missouri United Methodist Foundation, Inc. in St. Louis.

Memphis couple to speak Sunday at New Madrid

NEW MADRID — Trinity Charismatic Church will have Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely of Memphis, Tenn., as guest speakers for the 7 p.m. service Sunday, according to the Rev. Larry McClarty, pastor.

Ely is an attorney and has been very active in civic and political affairs at Memphis. He has served as president of the Shelby County Civic Clubs and his law partner is the present mayor of Memphis.

Ely has received many awards in his community and is a member of the United Methodist Church.

The Trinity congregation meets at the Community Building on Mill Street.

Dexter minister speaks tonight at Mount Olive

LILBOURN — The Rev. O. M. Montgomery of Dexter will be the guest speaker at a special service in Mount Olive National Baptist Church tonight at 7:30, the Rev. Garfery Wilson, pastor, has announced.

The Rev. Mr. Montgomery, who has been a preacher for 50 years, started when he was 15 years old and has preached in crusades and revivals all over America.

PRAYER: Father, we offer You our lives to be consecreated in Your service. Amen.

Children's home festival planned

BRIDGETON — The campus of Missouri Baptist Children's Home will be the scene for the 84th time as Baptists of Missouri gather for a day-long Strawberry Festival on June 7.

Starting at 9:30 a.m., the first buses and carloads of faithful supporters of Baptist child care work in Missouri will arrive.

From that moment until 5 p.m., 'between 3,000 and 5,000 people will assemble to renew acquaintences, hear gospel music, rummage through tables laden with art needlework and other crafts and feast on homemade cake, ice cream and strawberries.

The festival this year will be the first under the leadership of Howard L. Meyer, new administrator of the home.

The speaker at the afternoon session will be Dr. Rhuebin L. South, executive director of the Missouri Baptist Convention. Also, two piano and organ concerts will be featured in the new sanctuary of Fee Fee Baptist Church, located adjacent to the children's home campus, by Tedd Smith, pianist, and Don Hustad, organist, with the Billy Graham evangelistic team. Various church music groups will also sing during the day.

The purpose of the annual Strawberry Festival is to provide Baptists from all over the state a first-hand view of their child care program amid the experience of "old-fashined" picnic-on-the-grounds Christian fellowship from a bygone era.

The home is located at 11300 St. Charles Rock Road in Bridgeton.

Religion changes life of country singer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Religion, in one form or another, has always been a prime force in country music. Traditionally, however, country gospel entertainers have wanted to sing about their God.

But not Connie Smith.

"I was saved seven years ago, but I still sing the same type of country songs I always have," says the 33-year-old blonde.

"Sometimes I turn down a good song that gives too much glory to man. But most songs I sing, especially love songs, are about the Lord anyway, because I feel the love of God in everything."

When Bill Anderson brought Miss Smith to Nashville from Ohio in 1964, she was one of country music's Cinderella figures. Shortly after signing her first recording contract, her first single, "Once a Day" jumped to the top of the charts.

But for the naive newcomer to country music, Nashville was almost too much to handle.

"In a few years I had gone through my second divorce, was $75,000 in debt, had four lawsuits against me and was seeing a psychiatrist," she recalls. "That's as close to the bottom as I'd ever want to go.

"I was ignorant and too immature to face reality."

A performance on the WSM Gospel Show hosted by Rev. Jimmy Rogers Snow, son of Hank Snow, was the beginning of Miss Smith's conversion as what she calls a "born-again Christian."

"Rev. Snow saw that I needed to be saved and showed me the way. It was a soul searching time. I thought 'I can't do it alone, I can't raise two boys without a daddy.'

"But I began to be rebuilt and the changes were good. I married a fine, Christian husband who sought me out and who is constantly trying to make me happy. We have a loving, Christian home."

Miss Smith's two sons, by earlier marriages, are Kerry, 6, and Darren, 12. Her daughter, Julie Rae, 13 months, is the first child of her marriage to Marshall Haynes. A second is expected in April.

Family life and new-found Christianity have not kept Connie Smith from her career. She records about four albums a year for Columbia Records. Her single "I've Got My Baby on My Mind," is currently in the top 15 on the country music charts.

"I still love to sing and I love country music. Only now I don't seek a hit. I'm more interested in my family and not anxious about how my records do.

"Of course, I like success and I really appreciate it when a song does well."

The change in Miss Smith brought about a change in her attitude toward Nashville's music industry.

"When I started having troubles, I was bitter toward the industry for some time," she remembers. "Before I got saved, I was blaming it (the music business) for my unhappiness.

"But the Lord made me realize it was me and not the music people. This made me love the industry with a foundation and not as a fantasy that went wrong." v

Miss Smith likened her past in country music to that of another Cinderella figure, Jeannie C. Riley, who burst into the limelight with "Harper Valley PTA."

"Jeannie's highs have been higher and probably her lows lower," says Miss Smith. "But I was probably more immature even though I was older when I first had success."

Like her predecesor Miss Riley is an evangelical, new-found Christian. Both women attend the same church, as does another country music singer, Skeeter Davis.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, May 30, the 150th day of 1975. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1431, Joan of Arc was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

On this date —

In 1498, Christopher Columbus sailed from Spain on his third voyage to the New World.

In 1539, the Spanish explorer, Hernando de Soto, landed in Florida.

In 1883, a report that the new Brooklyn Bridge in New York was about to collapse created panic. Six persons on the bridge were trampled to death.

In 1942, during World War II, more than 1,100 British bombers pounded Cologne, Germany.

In 1961, the dictator of the Dominican Republic, Rafael Trujillo, was assassinated.

In 1963, an estimated 10,000 persons were killed in a windstorm which struck East Pakistan.

Ten years ago: Vivian Malone became the first black to be graduated from the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Five years ago: In South Vietnam, the Vietcong launched a surprise attack against the resort city of Dalat and seized parts of it.

One year ago: The House Judiciary Committee warned President Richard Nixon that he might be providing grounds for impeachment by refusing to honor committee subpoenaes for Watergate tapes.

Today's birthdays: Band leader Benny Goodman is 66. Former Postmaster General James Farley is 87.

Thought for today: Humility is the solid foundation of all the virtues. — Confucius, Chinese philosopher, 551-479 B-C.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, May 30, the 150th day of 1975. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1431, Joan of Arc was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

On this date —

In 1498, Christopher Columbus sailed from Spain on his third voyage to the New World.

In 1539, the Spanish explorer, Hernando de Soto, landed in Florida.

In 1883, a report that the new Brooklyn Bridge in New York was about to collapse created panic. Six persons on the bridge were trampled to death.

In 1942, during World War II, more than 1,100 British bombers pounded Cologne, Germany.

In 1961, the dictator of the Dominican Republic, Rafael Trujillo, was assassinated.

In 1963, an estimated 10,000 persons were killed in a windstorm which struck East Pakistan.

Ten years ago: Vivian Malone became the first black to be graduated from the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Five years ago: In South Vietnam, the Vietcong launched a surprise attack against the resort city of Dalat and seized parts of it.

One year ago: The House Judiciary Committee warned President Richard Nixon that he might be providing grounds for impeachment by refusing to honor committee subpoenaes for Watergate tapes.

Today's birthdays: Band leader Benny Goodman is 66. Former Postmaster General James Farley is 87.

Thought for today: Humility is the solid foundation of all the virtues. — Confucius, Chinese philosopher, 551-479 B-C.

NSM — No stated minimum price. These properties are offered as-is in Period II only on a one-time basis with reserve and HUD retains the right to refuse any and all offers.

Properties not sold at Tuesday bid-openings are automatically deleted herefrom pending Period changes, price adjustments and other actions by HUD, and will be relisted in the earliest practicable Friday advertisement.

Bid openings will normally be held on Tuesdays unless a legal holiday falls thereon in which case bids will be opened the next day, Wednesday. Normal Monday deadlines will be changed to preceding Fridays when a legal holiday falls on Monday. Otherwise intervening holidays will have no effect on the ten-calendar-day offering periods.

As-is offerings are listed for sale "AS-IS" with no warranty, not eligible for FHA mortgage insurance, all cash. The provisions of paragraph II of the sales contract do not apply as to guarantee. These properties may or may not conform to code requirements. Selling brokers will orally inform purchasers of the foregoing prior to execution of sales contract. Prices are minimum acceptable subject to sealed bid procedure. Special provisions applicable to lead paint treatment will apply. $150 sales bonus applys to all as-is offerings. The right is reserved to hold as-is offers for a maximum of ten days from date of bid opening. Bid requirements will conform generally with those set out in Forms HUD-9662 and 9662-A as modified by this notice and copies of said forms are available upon request.

Until further notice all section 235 financing is suspended. Properties designated as being available for 235 may be sold under Section 203 or with other non-assisted financing.

This listing represents an addendum to the monthly Public Information Release entitled "HUD - Acquired Properties Available for Sale or Rent" and is subject to the terms and conditions set out therein. Copies of said PIR are available upon request.

x $150 Sales Bonus

NSM — No stated minimum price. These properties are offered as-is in Period II only on a one-time basis with reserve and HUD retains the right to refuse any and all offers.

Properties not sold at Tuesday bid-openings are automatically deleted herefrom pending Period changes, price adjustments and other actions by HUD, and will be relisted in the earliest practicable Friday advertisement.

Bid openings will normally be held on Tuesdays unless a legal holiday falls thereon in which case bids will be opened the next day, Wednesday. Normal Monday deadlines will be changed to preceding Fridays when a legal holiday falls on Monday. Otherwise intervening holidays will have no effect on the ten-calendar-day offering periods.

As-is offerings are listed for sale "AS-IS" with no warranty, not eligible for FHA mortgage insurance, all cash. The provisions of paragraph II of the sales contract do not apply as to guarantee. These properties may or may not conform to code requirements. Selling brokers will orally inform purchasers of the foregoing prior to execution of sales contract. Prices are minimum acceptable subject to sealed bid procedure. Special provisions applicable to lead paint treatment will apply. $150 sales bonus applys to all as-is offerings. The right is reserved to hold as-is offers for a maximum of ten days from date of bid opening. Bid requirements will conform generally with those set out in Forms HUD-9662 and 9662-A as modified by this notice and copies of said forms are available upon request.

Until further notice all section 235 financing is suspended. Properties designated as being available for 235 may be sold under Section 203 or with other non-assisted financing.

This listing represents an addendum to the monthly Public Information Release entitled "HUD - Acquired Properties Available for Sale or Rent" and is subject to the terms and conditions set out therein. Copies of said PIR are available upon request.

Mini-Farms plat is still incorrect

BENTON--Scott County Assessor Bill Ferrell told the Scott County Court Thursday that the plat filed for the Mini-Farms Subdivision which was supposed to have been a corrected plat, is still incorrect.

He said the boundary lines on the plat are incorrect. What will have to be done, he said, is to make a corrected plat, plot the true boundaries on the plat as is recorded in the deeds, and then redefine block sections.

It is possible that many in the subdivision have not bought what they think they bought, Ferrell said. It is possible that some persons have built houses on land which is not legally theirs, thinking that they owned the land.

Ferrell's office is still looking into the situation. The court took no action on the matter Thursday.

Ken Waido of Malden, community planner with the Malden-based Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, met with the court and presented an application for funds to make a comprehensive study of the county.

He said the application now goes on a list for communities applying for the funds.

Waido said the community can pay for the study itself. The court is considering the possibility, but took no decision thursday.

Morris Young of Benton Route One asked about the Commerce Levee Road.

The court told him the road remains open.

Speaking of the recent controversy over the road, associate Judge Eldon Ziegenhorn said that the court is pleased with the way things now stand, and that he hopes the controversy is over.

The court is also considering possibilities for an appointment to the county Johnson Grass commission, but made no decision. They have until June 18 to make the decision.

shotgun and forced him to hand over two guns.

He said the young man then fled on foot in the general diretion of the nearby Gott farm.

The defense also argued that any statements made by Gott while in the county jail should be suppressed because the statements were made without the presence of an attorney.

Judge McHaney ordered the defense attorney to submit a brief detailing exactly what information he wished to suppress. He stated that since the sawed-off shotgun was the only item recovered that pertained to the case, a more detailed description of what material the defense wished to have suppressed should be submitted before a decision could be made.

In other court action, Ronnie Tomes, 17, of Dexter pleaded guilty to attempting to defraud a supermarket in Bernie. A presentencing investigation was ordered and the case was continued until June 26 for sentencing.

from $220 to $250 in cash. They said the robbers then forced them into the trunk of Morgan's car, where they were left locked in after driving a short distance from the scene. They were later able to free themselves when Morgan got out of the trunk by removing the back seat.

Morgan also testified that he had met both men previously.

Loopholes taken out

JEFFERSON CITY—The House Judiciary Committee has altered alleged loopholes in a Senate-passed campaign reporting bill.

The Senate version would have revised disclosure requirements in the campaign reporting law passed by voters last year.

The committee recommended House passage of the measure Thursday. Passage came after the committee took out what some senators claimed were loopholes to enable candidates, especially lawyers, to keep hidden money which might result in a conflict of interest.

Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Hannibal, the committee's chairman, said the changes are close to those sought by backers of the new law.

The committee put in an exemption if the total contributions of a candidate are under $500, a move to exempt candidates for many local offices.

A provision also was put in the measure to require the source of funds be listed by category, rather than by name and address, if the income or services received were more than $500 a year.

The change is intended to satisfy doctors' and lawyers' complaints that disclosure of the names of clients would violate their professional ethics.

A listing by category would still provide voters with information on whether a candidate is backed by any particular group, Volkmer said.

Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, one of the leaders in the initiative drive that led to adoption of the disclosure law, said he is basically satisfied with the committee bill, but would study it further before deciding whether it is adequate.

"We just want to make changes in the law to bring it into line with what the voters were promised," he said.

The elections commission surprised backers of the law in ruling that the campaign funds and income disclosure provisions apply to all candidates in the state for any post.

Bill to Bond

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Lawmakers sent a $36.3 million emergency appropriations bill to the governor Thursday, but not before Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, lodged a final blast at the $6.2 million earmarked for a new optometry school in St. Louis.

Marshall charged that the University of Missouri, which would operate the school, had not explored alternative sites for the school and that the Marillac College facility proposed to be bought to house the school for $5 million had not been appraised.

Marshall's statements were contrary to earlier remarks to legislators made by MU President C. Brice Ratchford.

"If you can't believe Brice Ratchford who can you believe?" Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, said amid a round of laughter in the upper chamber.

"Senator, I wouldn't touch that with a 10-foot pole," replied Marshall among another round of chuckles.

Sen. Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, predicted a gubernatorial veto of the Marillac site.

Burlison talks defense

FARMINGTON--"The United States can no longer defend and support the free world, but we must maintain powerful armed forces that can give an adequate response when the direct national interest of the country is involved," 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison remarked at today's meeting of the Farmington Optimist Club.

Burlison is a member of the subcommittee on defense of the House Appropriations Committee. This subcommittee has jurisdiction over the $100 billion budget for the armed forces and Central Intelligence Agency.

The Cape Girardeau congressman discussed some of the new costly and controversial weapons systems being debated in the 94th Congress. Some of those include: B-1 bomber, a new strategic manned bomber to replace the B-52; Trident submarine, to replace the Polaris and Poseidon as long-range carrier of atomic missiles; and airborne warning and control system, an airborne radar system designed to overcome the vulnerability of land-based radar with its weaknesses in picking up low flying objects in rough terrain.

Burlison is also addressing the Bunker Lions and Dexter and Cape Girardeau West Rotary clubs this week.

ACCENTUATES NATURAL BEATUY AND LOVING CARE

It was gratifying for us to note the loving remembrance shown by so many families that decorated the graves of their departed loved ones this Memorial Day just passed. Most of the day, there was continuous procession of cars passing through the Cemetery viewing the Avenue of Flags, which is an annual event, at Memorial Park Cemetery in Sikeston. All flags used actually draped the caskets of the departed veterans, as the golden nameplate at the foot of each flag indicated.
All of us appreciate the kind remarks made by so many of our lot owners about our care and dedication which is so apparent. Moreover, it is in keeping with our slogan "Natural Beauty With Perpetual Care".

The Senate version would have revised disclosure requirements in the campaign reporting law passed by voters last year.

The committee recommended House passage of the measure Thursday. Passage came after the committee took out what some senators claimed were loopholes to enable candidates, especially lawyers, to keep hidden money which might result in a conflict of interest.

Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Hannibal, the committee's chairman, said the changes are close to those sought by backers of the new law.

The committee put in an exemption if the total contributions of a candidate are under $500, a move to exempt candidates for many local offices.

A provision also was put in the measure to require the source of funds be listed by category, rather than by name and address, if the income or services received were more than $500 a year.

The change is intended to satisfy doctors' and lawyers' complaints that disclosure of the names of clients would violate their professional ethics.

A listing by category would still provide voters with information on whether a candidate is backed by any particular group, Volkmer said.

Rep. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, one of the leaders in the initiative drive that led to adoption of the disclosure law, said he is basically satisfied with the committee bill, but would study it further before deciding whether it is adequate.

"We just want to make changes in the law to bring it into line with what the voters were promised," he said.

The elections commission surprised backers of the law in ruling that the campaign funds and income disclosure provisions apply to all candidates in the state for any post.

Bill to Bond

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Lawmakers sent a $36.3 million emergency appropriations bill to the governor Thursday, but not before Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, lodged a final blast at the $6.2 million earmarked for a new optometry school in St. Louis.

Marshall charged that the University of Missouri, which would operate the school, had not explored alternative sites for the school and that the Marillac College facility proposed to be bought to house the school for $5 million had not been appraised.

Marshall's statements were contrary to earlier remarks to legislators made by MU President C. Brice Ratchford.

"If you can't believe Brice Ratchford who can you believe?" Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, said amid a round of laughter in the upper chamber.

"Senator, I wouldn't touch that with a 10-foot pole," replied Marshall among another round of chuckles.

Sen. Albert Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, predicted a gubernatorial veto of the Marillac site.

Burlison talks defense

FARMINGTON--"The United States can no longer defend and support the free world, but we must maintain powerful armed forces that can give an adequate response when the direct national interest of the country is involved," 10th District Rep. Bill D. Burlison remarked at today's meeting of the Farmington Optimist Club.

Burlison is a member of the subcommittee on defense of the House Appropriations Committee. This subcommittee has jurisdiction over the $100 billion budget for the armed forces and Central Intelligence Agency.

The Cape Girardeau congressman discussed some of the new costly and controversial weapons systems being debated in the 94th Congress. Some of those include: B-1 bomber, a new strategic manned bomber to replace the B-52; Trident submarine, to replace the Polaris and Poseidon as long-range carrier of atomic missiles; and airborne warning and control system, an airborne radar system designed to overcome the vulnerability of land-based radar with its weaknesses in picking up low flying objects in rough terrain.

Burlison is also addressing the Bunker Lions and Dexter and Cape Girardeau West Rotary clubs this week.

MEMORIAL PARK CEMETERY
SIKESTON, MO.
ACCENTUATES NATURAL BEATUY AND LOVING CARE

It was gratifying for us to note the loving remembrance shown by so many families that decorated the graves of their departed loved ones this Memorial Day just passed. Most of the day, there was continuous procession of cars passing through the Cemetery viewing the Avenue of Flags, which is an annual event, at Memorial Park Cemetery in Sikeston. All flags used actually draped the caskets of the departed veterans, as the golden nameplate at the foot of each flag indicated.
All of us appreciate the kind remarks made by so many of our lot owners about our care and dedication which is so apparent. Moreover, it is in keeping with our slogan "Natural Beauty With Perpetual Care".

As most of you golf enthusiast have recognized by now -- I'm not versed on the game and a matter fo fact have never played a round.

But I'm interested enough to read up on the sport and hopefully ... soon will be able to take my first trip around the course.

I've heard many a linksman say that once you've experienced the game, you'll want to play it daily. Maybe that's the reason I've never taken up the sport --- but I thoroughly enjoy it and plan on getting involved in it this summer.

In my reading, I've come up with some good tips and some good information on the game. Here is what I've learned ... Hope it'sll be helpful.

For those undaunted golfers who rise before the sun and are often queued up at the first tee when the rooster is still in the ay, the blurb on this month's cover, "Discovered: $300 Million for Publinx Courses," will likely cause a quickening of the pulse. Surely the publinxer deserves a glimmer of hope for the better day.

As far as Southeast Missouri is concerned, only two public golf courses are available for the avid linkster ... Those being at Cape Girardeau and Malden. If you don't want to travel and want to play locally --- normally you must pay high green fees.

There are many courses throughout the Bootheel, but the need for additional public courses is very evident. This fact is also true for tennis buffs, who find it increasingly harder to find a court open --- even with Sikeston's estimated 14 courts.

This is the time of year when the publinxer's plight as well as his extraordinary zest for play is on total display. Radio stations in the metropolitan areas, for instance, revive their weekend golf reports that provide the delay for teeing-off at the nearby public courses. And the ininitiated can be jolted by a report of that wars ..." There is a seven hour wait at make believe park.." admittedly, seven hours is about the worst You'll hear about, but without keeping an accurate account, I would say that the average delay on a good-weather weekend is five hours. And that's incredible.

Our story, which is enclosed in this small golf section, does not promise instant relief to the problem. Indeed, more than one golf season could roll by before much neglected publinxer experiences any appreciable benefit from the huge appropriation that now sits in Washington. But it does hold out promise for better days, and that in itself is progresss.

How much of the $300 Million board is spent on the construction of public golf courses will depend largely on how much clamoring or lobbying is done by the golfers themselves at the local level. It isn't likely that these will be served up on a silver tray by the public fathers. If we can use a limited survey conducted as a yardstick, it is safe to say that many public recreation planners do not know that this fund even exists.

Sikeston planned a nine hole course in its original plans for the sports complex, but had to eliminate it because of the lack of funds. Many would have preferred the elimination of a couple of ball parks or even the lake instead of the course, but the city fathers made the choice.

City manager Charles Church recently noted that citizens had been hollering for additional tennis courts, but his and the golf course has been tabled until more money is available by the city to meet matching funds. Church pointed out that the one cent sales tax proposal would open the door for many activities and programs in Sikeston --- IF PASSED.

If golfers band together and let their town, city or county administrators know of the existing need for expanded facilities, this would amount to a very important first step. Most politicians play their game by ear. The louder the voice of the people, the better chance

Snead at 63: sport's grand old man

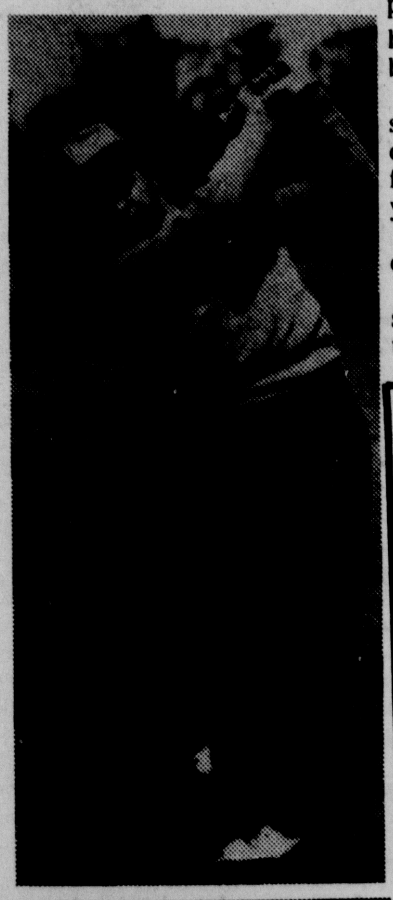
By Ira Berkow
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — If Sam Snead did not in fact invent the game of golf a few hundred years ago, he must at least have been in history's first twosome.

Yet Snead still plays the game. He not only plays it, he still plays on the pro tour. He not only plays on the pro tour, he is still a contender. Last year, for example, he tied for second in two tour events, tied for third in the Professional Golfers Association tournament, and came in fourth in the Quad Cities. On May 27 Sam Snead will be 63 years old.

He turned pro in 1933, the same year Franklin Delano Roosevelt took office as president. Dillinger rampaged. Babe Ruth hit 34 homers and batted .301 that season. The Masters Tournament was nothing but a gleam in Bobby Jones' eye. It was a long time ago.

Snead went on to win 87 tour events (including every major tournament — the PGA, the Masters, the British Open — except the U.S. Open, which he has lost several times in the final holes in the screwiest fashion). He has won 134 tournaments and, at rough estimate, has hit altogether over 1,640,000 shots. He and that famous straw hat with the flashy band and his sweet, sweet swing are in the Golf Hall of Fame.



He began hitting a rolled up stocking with a broomstick before he was five years old, in Hot Springs, Va. And he remains nearly as loose-limbed as ever. A favorite trick of his to this day is to swing his leg up and kick the top of a door that might be as high as seven feet off the floor.

He seems as leathery, as solid, as baldish as he has for many years, and one of the few noticeable changes was his undertaking the funny side-saddle putting style because of a common nervousness on the green.

Otherwise, he is the same as ever — incredible. Though it is hard to imagine him doing anything besides wrapping a golf club around his neck, I asked him recently what he thinks he might be doing if golf, heaven forbid, did not exist.

"Never gave it much thought," he said, in his familiar drawl. "I started out in baseball, actually. A pitcher. Then I tried some football. But I wasn't heavy enough for football — weighed about 148 — 30 pounds less than now. Though I was fast enough. I could do the 100 in 10 flat when I was in high school. But I found early that playin' golf a man can last a heckuva lot longer than playin' baseball or football.

"I caddied when I was a kid in summers. And got an assistant club pro job a year after I finished high school. I was 20 years old."

Twenty? I asked. Isn't that old for finishing high school?

"See, we don't finish high school down there in Virginia too early. Between the huntin' and the hookey and the fishin', well, it takes a little bit longer," he added, smiling with his crinkly but careful blue eyes.

"I worked in a drug store all the time I was goin' to high school. I was a soda jerker and I sold patent medicines and cosmetics. But I didn't want to be a pharmacist. I found that so

Money available for courses

There's a big pile of money waiting in Washington to be spent on public golf courses. And judging by recent sentiments in Congress the pile may grow even higher in the next year or so.

The sums are part of the Land and Water Conservation Fund set up a decade ago. Each year the fund makes available $300 million to localities for aid in financing recreation programs of all sorts, including public golf courses.

Funds are provided by revenues the Federal Government takes from offshore oil and mineral drilling, motor boat fuel taxes and sales of some type of Federal property.

According to an April article in Golf Magazine, Congress is talking about increasing the yearly payment to at least $500 million and perhaps as high as a billion dollars. That upper level seems unlikely to pass the full Congress in the present economic climate, although probably even budget conscious President Ford, an avid golfer and skier, would accept such a figure. Not all that money would be earmarked for golf courses, but there is no reason why a large share of it cannot be spent for that purpose because there are no rules prohibitng it.

The Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which administers the funds, recently checked how much money had been spent on golf courses since the program was started 11 years ago. The total figure was slightly more than $54 million. More significant is the fact that a state and-or locality, to qualify for this money, has to put up a matching share or more. B.O.R. will provide a maximum of 50 percent of a project's cost. That means more than $108 million has gone for public golf courses under the fund's direction. Again, not every dollar of these funds went for golf courses. They may have been spent on a recreation complex that included a golf course, for example. But the important point is that all the funds were golf related. And judging by recent governmental studies, golf should continue to do well under the program.

Several months ago, the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation issued some economic projections as to how much Federal support might be justified in the next few years for golf as compared to camping. The report estimates that to fully satisfy the growing need for golf courses, as many as 1,589 new ones might be needed in the next few years compared to 316 camp grounds. However, the report also contains this warning: Only about a third of that number of golf courses can be justified, because the cost of building a golf course for the limited number of people who can utilize it at any given time makes such funding less attractive than some other types of recreation that can offer to more people facilities at a lower price — such as a new beach or perhaps hiking trails. Those estimates are not meant to discourage state and local authorities seeking more golf courses backed by Federal funds. On the contrary, the door is open to gfolf planners and anyone else who can qualify for fund assistance.

Availability of these funds should come as good news to publinxers who have come to expect long early morning waiting lines and snail's pace play on jammed courses. Currently, municipal course players constitute almost 45 per cent of the total number of golfers in the United States. Yet, they have only 13.5 per cent of the country's go facilities available to them. ..(See pictorial chart on this page .) The situation is certain to worsen with population grtowth, urbanization and increased leisure time. The Federal funds to help correct the imbalance are there, but it seems from the figures few municipalities are taking advantage of them, even though the process of applying for the money is surprisingly simple.

The program works this way. Local planners for some public agency — a city, town or regional park authority — have to devise a concrete plan for a golf course or recreation area that includes a golf course. The plan must clearly prove that it would benefit the residents of the area.

Then final details of the plan must be discussed with state recreation officials. It is their job to take the plan to the Federal level and seek the funds. Fund payments are made

The sums are part of the Land and Water Conservation Fund set up a decade ago. Each year the fund makes available $300 million to localities for aid in financing recreation programs of all sorts, including public golf courses.

Funds are provided by revenues the Federal Government takes from offshore oil and mineral drilling, motor boat fuel taxes and sales of some type of Federal property.

According to an April article in Golf Magazine, Congress is talking about increasing the yearly payment to at least $500 million and perhaps as high as a billion dollars. That upper level seems unlikely to pass the full Congress in the present economic climate, although probably even budget conscious President Ford, an avid golfer and skier, would accept such a figure. Not all that money would be earmarked for golf courses, but there is no reason why a large share of it cannot be spent for that purpose because there are no rules prohibitng it.

The Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which administers the funds, recently checked how much money had been spent on golf courses since the program was started 11 years ago. The total figure was slightly more than $54 million. More significant is the fact that a state and-or locality, to qualify for this money, has to put up a matching share or more. B.O.R. will provide a maximum of 50 percent of a project's cost. That means more than $108 million has gone for public golf courses under the fund's direction. Again, not every dollar of these funds went for golf courses. They may have been spent on a recreation complex that included a golf course, for example. But the important point is that all the funds were golf related. And judging by recent governmental studies, golf should continue to do well under the program.

Several months ago, the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation issued some economic projections as to how much Federal support might be justified in the next few years for golf as compared to camping. The report estimates that to fully satisfy the growing need for golf courses, as many as 1,589 new ones might be needed in the next few years compared to 316 camp grounds. However, the report also contains this warning: Only about a third of that number of golf courses can be justified, because the cost of building a golf course for the limited number of people who can utilize it at any given time makes such funding less attractive than some other types of recreation that can offer to more people facilities at a lower price — such as a new beach or perhaps hiking trails. Those estimates are not meant to discourage state and local authorities seeking more golf courses backed by Federal funds. On the contrary, the door is open to gfolf planners and anyone else who can qualify for fund assistance.

Availability of these funds should come as good news to publinxers who have come to expect long early morning waiting lines and snail's pace play on jammed courses. Currently, municipal course players constitute almost 45 per cent of the total number of golfers in the United States. Yet, they have only 13.5 per cent of the country's go facilities available to them. ..(See pictorial chart on this page .) The situation is certain to worsen with population grtowth, urbanization and increased leisure time. The Federal funds to help correct the imbalance are there, but it seems from the figures few municipalities are taking advantage of them, even though the process of applying for the money is surprisingly simple.

The program works this way. Local planners for some public agency — a city, town or regional park authority — have to devise a concrete plan for a golf course or recreation area that includes a golf course. The plan must clearly prove that it would benefit the residents of the area.

Then final details of the plan must be discussed with state recreation officials. It is their job to take the plan to the Federal level and seek the funds. Fund payments are made to the state, not to local authorities.

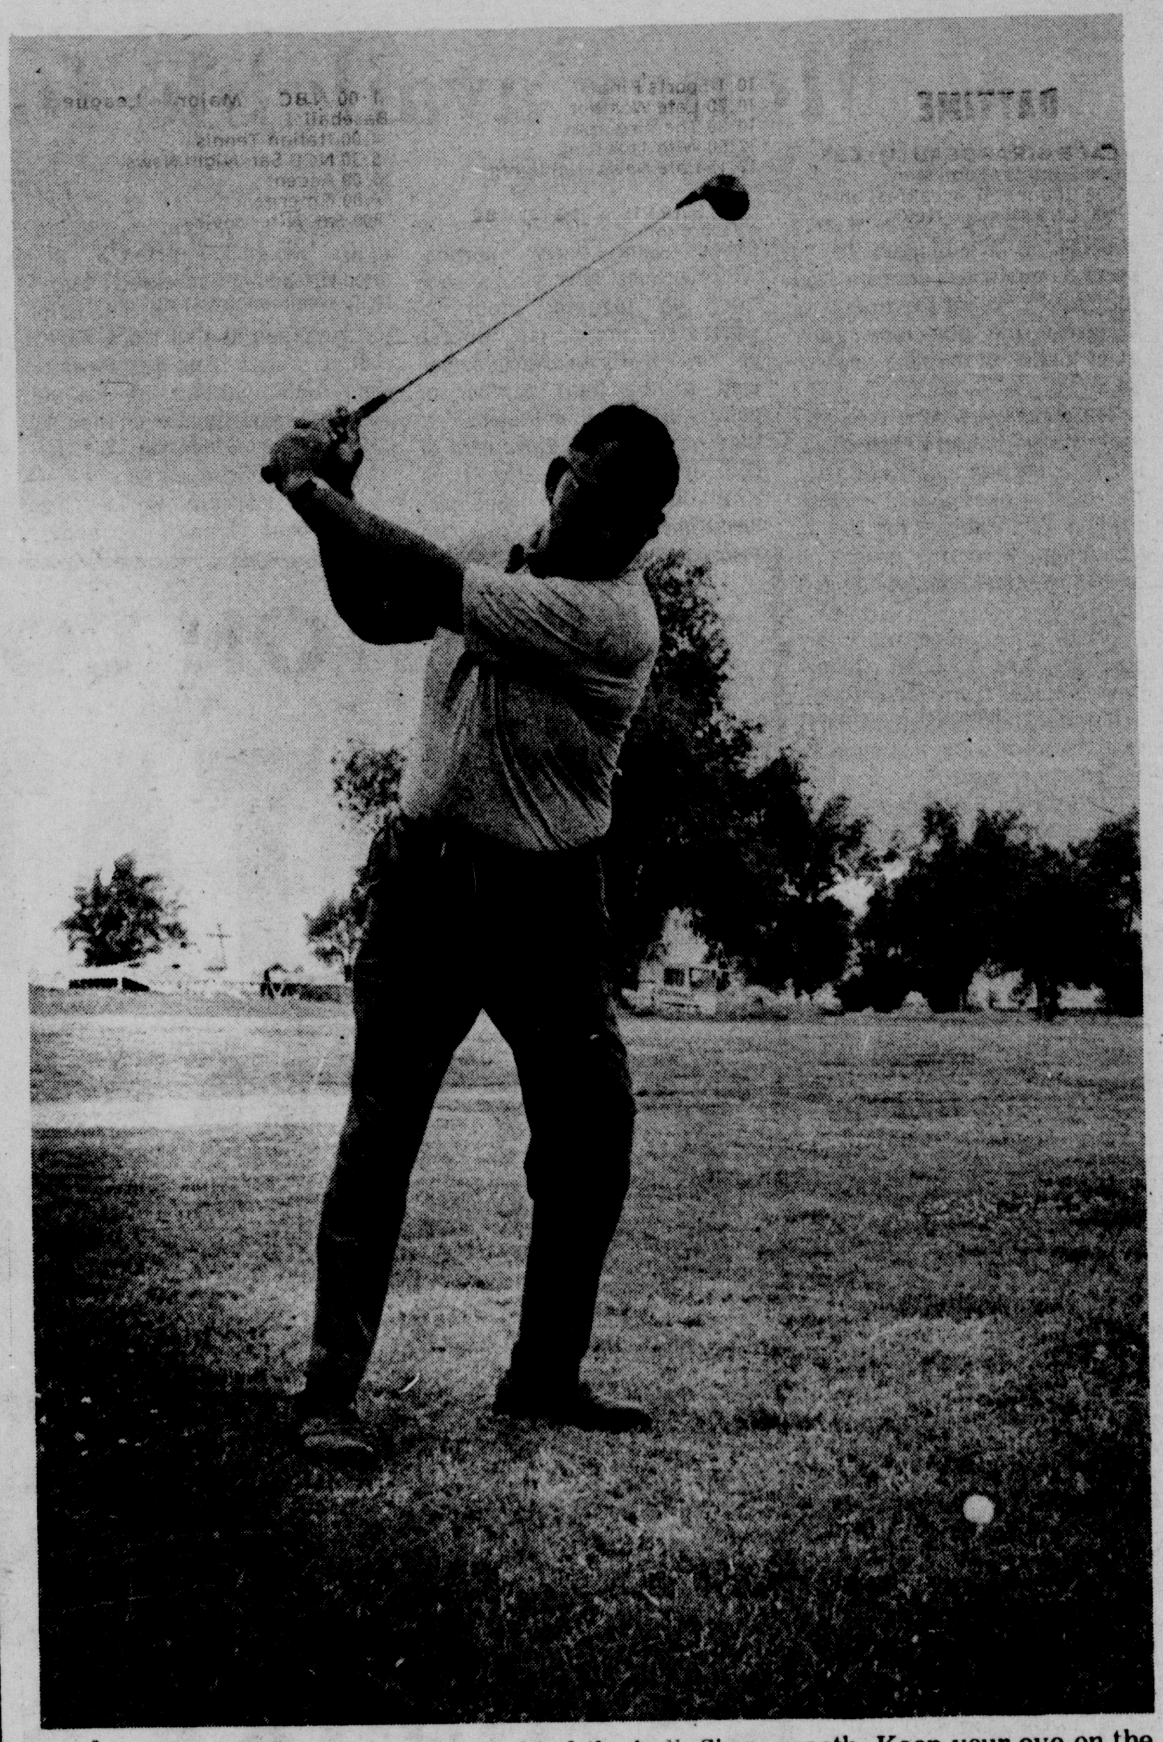
Municipalities that already have taken advantage of B.O.R. funds report none of the entanglement in "red tape" that might be expected with Federal grants of significant sums. Officials in Greensboro, N.C., for instance, received $617,000 in Federal money from the B.O.R., and now have Bryan Park, a recreational area that includes a municipal golf course of championship caliber. The period from the time of application by the state to the regional B.O.R. office in Atlanta to notification that the application had been approved amounted to only 90 days.



When teeing with a driver, stay behind the ball. Sing smooth. Keep your eye on the ball. Follow through high. Gene Dawson, Sikeston Country Club pro shows his swing.

Bryan Park, the municipality already owned the land, which, incidentally, had been purchased with Federal "open-space" funds in the early 1960s. What the town sought and got was the B.O.R. maximum — 50 per cent of the cost of the project. The remaining 50 per cent came from a municipal bond issue. The park project included tennis courts, picnic areas and hiking trails in addition to construction of he golf course. Hester feels that by including facilities for activities other than golf in a recreational project, an application is likely to be viewed more favorably by the B.O.R.

"We experienced excellent cooperation from B.O.R. and received prompt, efficient attention to our project plans," says the Greensboro Director of Parks and Recreation, Oka Hester.

However, a broad-scale recreational facility does not seem to be absolutely essential to the success of a town's request for funds; nor is there any requirement that the project involve any development or construction. East Hartford, Conn., received $650,000 in Federal money — 50 per cent o the purchase price of an existing, family-owned daily-fee course. For the remainder of the cost, the State of Connecticut put up 25 per cent and the other 25 per cent came out of a municipal bond issue, following a referendum.

Louis Dell'Angela, East Hartfort Director of Development, says that getting the actual check from B.O.R. took one year, but he points out, too, that the delay was not because of any inefficiency by the agency. The delay primarily stemmed from local dissent on the purchase. Despite opposition, the project has proved successful. Dell'Angela reports that the course is bringing in a net profit of $20,000 a year over the nannual municipal bond costs. And in the process, the town has helped ease the game's public course congestion, saved an existing course and wrested open space from the grasp of urban sprawl.

Now is a good time to seek funds. They are not being used up as fast as they are being offered. Right now about $262 million in unappropriated funds is waiting to be picked up. And that does not include money that will be made available for the coming year. What has happened is this: States have a three-year period in which to qualify for money appropriated each year . Many states have been slow in qualifying, which has created a huge backlog in available money. For localities seeking a public golf course, the time is now to begin planning, although Federal officials concede that in this period of tight money and high interest rates some of the unappropriated money may go begging.

10:30-ABC — WIDE WORLD SPECIAL — "Geraldo Rivera; Good Night America"

NBC THURSDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES "Elvis ...That's The Way It Is" -- Feature length motion picture examining Elvis Presley as an artist and night-club performer. Presley sings 27 songs in the film, directed by two-time Oscar winner Denis Sanders. (color)

Elvis Presley is the subject of a unique motion picture which provides a behind-the- scenes look at the dynamic performer, when "Elvis ... That's the Way It Is" is colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" June 5 8-10 p.m. CDT.

Filmed on location in the United States in Las Vegas, Phoenix, and Los Angeles, and in Luxembourg, the film's focal point is Elvis on stage performing his nightclub act.

The movie also examines the ups and downs he experiences putting the show together in the days before opening night and includes interviews with Presley fans. In addition, scenes form the Fifth Annual Elvis Presley Appreciation Society Convention in Luxembourg are included.

10:30-CBS — LATE MOVIE — "Three Bullets for a Long Gun" Stars Beau Brummell and Keith Van Der Wat -- The Western drama concerns two partners who search for a hidden treasure but find their paths blocked by renegade

NOSE-propelled, a peanut is pushed across a busy street intersection in El Sobrante, Calif. by Carrie Simon, her penalty as captain of the losing team in the eighth annual Young Life Olympics sponsored by the Young Life Club, a nonsectarian teen organization.

Group Sticks to Missouri Roots

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Ozark Mountain Daredevils' first record was cut in London, the second in Bolivar, Mo.

The first, "Ozark Mountain Daredevils," was cut last year at Olympic Studios, where producer Glyn Johns usually cuts. From it came a single, "If You Want To Get to Heaven," by John Dillon and Steve Cash, which is described as a fun song, not a religious song. That single sold about half a million copies, says Dillon during an interview he shares with Larry Lee of the six-man group.

"Jackie Blue," the single from the second album, "It'll Shine When It Shines," was No. 3 on the best-selling chart of May 3. Dillon says "Jackie Blue" reached higher on the charts than the first single, but hasn't sold as many copies, due to the current economy.

"People are watching what they're spending.

"The first album is approaching gold now. It's like a fairytale. I can't believe it. And publicity wise, it wasn't pushed that much. A lot of our success has been through word of mouth. And that's really the best way to happen."

The group got together in Springfield, Mo., and all except Dillon, who was born in Arkansas, are from Missouri. They all live now on farms in the Springfield vicinity. "We cut the second album outside Bolivar, Mo., real close to home, on the Ruedi Valley Ranch. That's not a take-off on Rudy Vallee. Dr. Ruedi is a woman professor in Springfield. The ranch, which is in a valley, in a glade surrounded by woods, was part of her dad's estate. She rented it to Randy Chowning, who's in the group, and his brother, Rusty, who's one of our managers, for a small amount of rent, for them to take care of. The house on it was built in 1843. We brought a mobile unit from Los Angeles and recorded the album in the living room."

The cover of the album shows Lydia Benham, who cooked for those working on the album for two weeks. "She cooked for threshers and farm harvest workers in the 1930s. We wanted to take her picture and she wouldn't allow it. Finally she allowed one picture and she stuck her hands out like a take-off on a glamorous pose." That's the one on the album cover. The shack pictured on the back of the album isn't Dr. Ruedi's house.

Lee says that Randy Chowning would have to be considered the founder of the group. "I was tending bar in a theater in Springfield and John was singing there Thursday nights with his wife, Elizabeth. Steve Cash was playing a little harmonica there. Randy said he wasn't happy with the band he was in and he wanted to do original material. Most bands were doing top 40 songs just to play in clubs; people wanted to hear what they heard on the radio. He knew I'd played in a band.

"At the time we weren't thinking about records. We

Dillon is pleased that the group got a record contract without having to leave Springfield. Even now, they are at home more than they're on the road, unlike most contemporary music bands.

Sr. men organized in 1963

By CINDY MIEDERHOFF

Seventeen senior golfers, between the ages of 50 and 65 years, gathered at the Sikeston Country Club September 15, 1963, and organized the Semo Seniors' Golf Association, Incorporated. The officers of southern Illinois assisted with the organization.

Four country clubs -- Sikeston, Kennett, Cape Girardeau, and Dexter — were represented but it was expected that other country club golfers throughout the Bootheel would join the association soon.

The officers elected included J. F. Cox, Jr. of Sikeston Country Club, president; Jere Kingsbury, Caruthersville Club, vice-president; C. Clarence Scott, Sikeston Country Club, secretary-treasurer. To start there would be a five member board of directors which was later expanded so that every country club in the area would be represented on it.

An organizational tournament was held by the new golf association in which all of the seventeen senior golfers participated. They were divided into three groups (1) age 50 to 55 (2) 56 to 60 and (3) 61 or older.

Winners in the tournament were in Group A: J. F. Cox, Jr., Sikeston; Paul Price, Kennett; and Roscoe Lewis, Cape Girardeau. Group B winners included: Lee Trammell, Sr., Dexter; Oren Dahl, Sikeston; and John Stephens, Kennett. The Group C winners were: Dewey Miles, Kennett; C. Clarence Scott, Sikeston; and Noble Duncan, Kennett.

The Association accepts invitations from country clubs in the Southeast Missouri area. A tournament is held each year the weekend after Labor Day. The site of the 1974 tournament was Kimbland at Jackson. This year's tournament will be held at Malden Country Club. A tentative invitation has been received from the Cape Country Club as the site for the 1976 tournament action.

The membership of the golf association at present is two hunderd with members from eighteen country clubs in Southeast Missouri and ten counties. The members range in a perimeter from Bonne Terre to Caruthersville and Poplar Bluff to Charleston. The most number of members hail from the Cape Country Club with a membership of forty-five. Sikeston's club has a total of twenty-one members.

Charleston golf

The Charleston Country Club holds various scheduled golf events through the year. The Men's Invitational Annual Tournament and Individual Medal Play is restricted to one hundred players. The tournament is held August 2 and 3 with thirty-six holes played. Last year's tournament winner was Jim Warf of Sikeston. The Mixed Scramble event is held on Memorial Day, July 4, and Labor Day. Scotch Golf is held each Wednesday afternoon. Ladies Day is scheduled for each Thursday. The Annual Ladies Scramble is held July 10 with eighteen holes being played. The Annual Junior Golf Tourney is held on August 13. Mixed Scramble Tournament takes place September 21 with eighteen holes of play.

The Country Club at Charleston has been working on improvements this year with one of their projects being that of renovating the swimming pool. They have also undertaken the task of building two tennis courts and golf cart paths.

The officers of the Charleston Country Club include Marion Waggener as President, Noonie Bruce as the vice-president, and Leslie Fox, Jr. as the secretary-treasurer. The club has a nine hole course. The course yardage is 5900 yards or eighteen holes.

The members of the hole-in-one roll include Frank Lair, J. Lanier Byrd, Dr. Bill Kabler, Bud Williams, Maurice Newton Bill Russell, Bob French, Q. T. Quertermous, Heinie Hequembourg, Hartrell Brock, Ed Felts, L. G. Black, Jr., Roy Williams, Pete Golightly, and Frank Hequembourg with two.

The 1974 Men's Champion was Woody Simmons and the 1974 Ladies Champion is Adele Atteberry.

same score, or by one side winning low ball and losing the aggregate. The event is sometimes played with low ball worth two points and aggregate one.

Scorefest

May include two teams of any size. The losing side is that which scores the least number of points on the following scale: Net scores under 70 (75 points); from 70-74 (40); from 75-79 (25); 80-84 (15); 85-89 (10); 90-100 (5), and net scores over 100 (2 points).

Selected Score

Each competitor plays 36 holes. He selects his best score on each hole from the two cards and applies his handicap. The golfer with the lowest net score for his 18 holes is the winner.

Specks

Player or team accumulates "specks" for the following on each hole: longest tee shot in fairway, first on the green, closest on approach to pin, a one-putt green and lowest total for the hole. Individual or side with most specks at end of 18 holes wins.

Scratch and Scramble

Four-ball stroke play. On each hole, partners' scores are added and divided by two to obtain the team's score. Play is more interesting if high-and low-handicappers are paired.

Shotgun Tournament

At least one team is stationed at tee of each hole and all are started with blast of shotgun.

Splash Tournament

Players must contribute one new ball for every one they hit into a water hazard during round. A player not turning in his card is fined three balls just on suspicion. The three lowest net scores divvy up the balls on a 60-30-10 split.

String Tournament

Each player is given a piece of string in lieu of a handicap. The string is measured to allow one foot for each handicap stroke. The player or side is allowed to advance the ball by hand to a more favorable spot, measuring the distance with the string and cutting off the length used. When the string is used up the player is on his own. The string may be used to advance the ball into the cup while putting, or to move away from an obstruction, etc.

Target Contest

With the cup as bull's-eye, mark four circles with largest about 35 feet in diameter, the next 25 feet, the third 15 feet, and the last 5 feet. Then set three tees at distances of 100, 75 and 50 yards from the hole. The contestants, using a club of their choice, play one shot from each of the tees. Score results as follows: Hole-in-one (25 points); ball in 5-foot circle (5 points); in 15-foot circle (3); in 25-foot circle (2), and in 35-foot circle (1 point).

Throw-Out Tourney

Played at full handicap under medal play, each player may throw out his three worst holes of round of 18, thereby making only 15 effective in determining the net final score.

Tin Whistle

On match-play basis, one point is scored for each hole made in one over par; three points for par an five points for a birdie. Player with greatest number of points wins. Played on handicap basis with strokes taken at the hole specified. A par, minus handicap stroke, counts as a birdie.

MOST BIRDIES

In winning the 1959 Masters, Art Wall scored eight birdies during the final round, including five on the last six holes. He won by only one stroke. The tournament record for 72 holes is 270, shared by Ben Hogan (1953) and Jack Nicklaus (1965).

RECORD

Games golfers play

The game of golf can wear two faces. The one we normally see is that of straight head-to-head competition (match play, i.e., one player against one player, two against two, etc.) or every player against the field (stroke play, i.e., lowest number of strokes for given number of holes). The other face, though, is what we are concerned with here, that is, the infinite variety of competitions. Have you ever heard of Remorseful Golf? Tin Whistle Tournament? Bingle-Bangle-Bungle? Grenies? Probably not, but these and many other novel events can spice up the weekend schedule at your club. Try suggesting some of the following events to your chairman or committee; you and all your golfing friends will be glad you did.

Alibi Event

Contestant may replay the same number of shots as allowed by his handicap, but not more than one on any single hole and with the exception of putts.

Average Score

Stroke play. Partners average their gross scores for each of the 18 holes and deduct half their combined handicap from their 18-hole total. Half strokes count as whole strokes after totaling.

Best-Ball Twosome

Two players play as a team, taking handicaps as they fall on card. Lowest score on a hole with handicap counts toward team's best-ball score on a hole is counted. Team having the lowest best-ball score wins.

Bingle-Bangle-Bungle

Three points on each hole. One point to player whose ball first comes to rest on the surface of the green. Second point to player whose ball is nearest the cub after all players are on the green. Third point to player whose ball is nearest the cup after all players are on the green. Third point to player who first sinks his putt. On short holes, no point for first on green, but this point goesto player whose ball is second nearest the pin. In settling up, each player wins the difference between his total points and the total points of each player with fewer points.

Bline Holes Tournament

Winning score is based on only nine holes, selected individually from among the 18 to be played. Holes are selected after all players have teed off so that they have no knowledge of holes that will count. Half handicap is usually used to compile net totals.

Bobs and Birds

Bobs are points gathered for landing closest to pin on par-3 holes; birds are points tallied for birdies on any hole.

Choice Score

The best score of partners on each hole is chosen to arrive at an 18-hole total. Full or ¾ handicaps are permitted and contestants enter their net scores to compute the round.

Blind Partners

An 18-hole stroke-play round with 100 per cent handicap. Players may play with anyone of their choice but partners are drawn after everyone has teed off so that players don't know their partners until they finish. Team with lowest best-ball score wins.

Cross-Country Tournament

Start about a mile from the course and play across country finishing on one of the greens near the clubhouse. The ball must be played as it lies.

Drop-Out Tournament

Each player uses his full handicap and plays against par. Players remain in the contest only until they lose a hole to par. Player who goes the farthest wins.

Flag Tournament

Each player is given a small flag with his name attached. Using his full handicap, he plays until he has used the number of strokes equalling par plus his handicap. He plants the flag after using his quota of strokes, playing an extra hole or two if necessary. The winner is the player who plants his flag farthest around the course.

Get-Acquainted Tourney

Play is 18-hole medal with full handicaps. Each competitor must play with a partner with whom he has not previously been paired.

Greenies

Point given for stopping closest to cup on tee shot on par-3 hole.

High and Low Ball

In partner play, with two points involved on each hole, one is awarded for the best ball and the second for the best of the two poorest balls.

Kicker's Tournament

(also called Blind Bogey) The committee draws a number and announces that it was, for example, between 60 and 70. Players select their handicaps without knowing the exact number drawn. The player whose net score equals, or is closest to, the number drawn is the winner.

Kickers' Replay

Each competitor is permitted to replay any two shots of a round. He must continue with the replayed ball once it is elected.

Long-and-Short Tournament

Some players have good short games and poorer long games and vice versa. This event combines the abilities of these two types of golfers. One player does the driving and long work, his partner does the approaching and putting. Players choose their own partners.

Low Net Foursome

In a field of contestants, the total score of one foursome of players, less handicaps, determines the winner.

Million-Dollar Tournament

Players purchase $10,000 of scrip money at first tee but must pay the other members of their foursome for the following: ..$100 for hitting into the rough; $200 for hitting into wrong fairway or hitting tree and bouncing into right fairway; $300 for missing ball entirely; $300 for swearing; $100 for stopping to look for a tee; $300 for loss of ball, to be paid each member who helps look for it with a two-minute time limit; $300 from each member of the foursome to the player whose ball is first on the green, first down. Player with most scrip money at end o 18 holes is the winner. Scrip can be good for merchandise at pro shop.

Mixed Foursomes

Partners consist of man and woman, with man driving from odd-numbered tees and woman from even-numbered (or the other way round). Partners play every other shot from tee to green, allowing half of combined handicaps.

Monkey Foursome

Each member of the foursome carries a single club, those selected generally being a wood, 2-iron, 5-iron and putter. Each member plays the single ball in rotation from wherever it lies with his chosen club. Thus a player may be forced to drive with a putter, putt with a 5-iron, etc.

Nassau Tournament

Sometimes known as Best Nines play, this type of competiton finds prizes given for the best outgoing nine, the best incoming, and for best 18 holes. A player's full handicap applies to 18-hole scores, and half handicap for each of the nine-hole scores.

No-Alibi Tournament

Instead of deducting his handicap at the end of the round, each player is allowed to replay during the round the number of shots equalling three-quarters of his handicap. A replayed stroke must be used even if it is worse than the original stroke.

Odd-and-Even Tourney

Played in foursomes with two players to a ream, one plays all even holes and the other all odd. Using one-half the combined handicaps, low net is winner.

One-Ball Play

Two players, as partners, take alternate shots at same ball from tee to green and also drive alternately from successive tees.

Point Event

Contestants receive three points for each birdie scored, two for each par and one point for each hole requiring one stroke more than par. Played at full handicap, the winner is golfer with the greatest number of points.

Putting Tournament

The player making the fewest putts over 18 holes of play is the winner.

Remorseful Golf

Each player has the privilege of making his opponent re-play any four shots during the round. These may be shots which he considers lucky or feels cannot be duplicated.

Round-Robin

Using four-ball play, partners are changed every six holes, so that each player engages in three six-hole matches with each of the others in the foursome as a partner.

Scotch Foursome

Two players to a side. On each hole, there is a point for low ball and a point for low aggregate score of a side. Holes may be halved by all players making the

Games golfers play

The game of golf can wear two faces. The one we normally see is that of straight head-to-head competition (match play, i.e., one player against one player, two against two, etc.) or every player against the field (stroke play, i.e., lowest number of strokes for given number of holes). The other face, though, is what we are concerned with here, that is, the infinite variety of competitions. Have you ever heard of Remorseful Golf? Tin Whistle Tournament? Bingle-Bangle-Bungle? Grenies? Probably not, but these and many other novel events can spice up the weekend schedule at your club. Try suggesting some of the following events to your chairman or committee; you and all your golfing friends will be glad you did.

Alibi Event

Contestant may replay the same number of shots as allowed by his handicap, but not more than one on any single hole and with the exception of putts.

Average Score

Stroke play. Partners average their gross scores for each of the 18 holes and deduct half their combined handicap from their 18-hole total. Half strokes count as whole strokes after totaling.

Best-Ball Twosome

Two players play as a team, taking handicaps as they fall on card. Lowest score on a hole with handicap counts toward team's best-ball score on a hole is counted. Team having the lowest best-ball score wins.

Bingle-Bangle-Bungle

Three points on each hole. One point to player whose ball first comes to rest on the surface of the green. Second point to player whose ball is nearest the cub after all players are on the green. Third point to player whose ball is nearest the cup after all players are on the green. Third point to player who first sinks his putt. On short holes, no point for first on green, but this point goesto player whose ball is second nearest the pin. In settling up, each player wins the difference between his total points and the total points of each player with fewer points.

Bline Holes Tournament

Winning score is based on only nine holes, selected individually from among the 18 to be played. Holes are selected after all players have teed off so that they have no knowledge of holes that will count. Half handicap is usually used to compile net totals.

Bobs and Birds

Bobs are points gathered for landing closest to pin on par-3 holes; birds are points tallied for birdies on any hole.

Choice Score

The best score of partners on each hole is chosen to arrive at an 18-hole total. Full or ¾ handicaps are permitted and contestants enter their net scores to compute the round.

Blind Partners

An 18-hole stroke-play round with 100 per cent handicap. Players may play with anyone of their choice but partners are drawn after everyone has teed off so that players don't know their partners until they finish. Team with lowest best-ball score wins.

Cross-Country Tournament

Start about a mile from the course and play across country finishing on one of the greens near the clubhouse. The ball must be played as it lies.

Drop-Out Tournament

Each player uses his full handicap and plays against par. Players remain in the contest only until they lose a hole to par. Player who goes the farthest wins.

Flag Tournament

Each player is given a small flag with his name attached. Using his full handicap, he plays until he has used the number of strokes equalling par plus his handicap. He plants the flag after using his quota of strokes, playing an extra hole or two if necessary. The winner is the player who plants his flag farthest around the course.

Get-Acquainted Tourney

Play is 18-hole medal with full handicaps. Each competitor must play with a partner with whom he has not previously been paired.

Greenies

Point given for stopping closest to cup on tee shot on par-3 hole.

High and Low Ball

In 1957 Byron Nelson put his tee shot into the drink at the par-three 16th. His second attempt, a superb 7-iron shot, struck the flagpole squarely about a foot above the cup and bounced back into the water. Nelson said this was the only such accident of his career. Toney Penna was less fortunate. He recalls the same thing happening to him, on No. 12, twice, once in the 1938 tournament and again in 1939.

IN A RUT

Billy Joe Patton birdied the par-4 ninth hole on all four days in the 1954 tournament. In a friendly round the next Monday he birdied Number Nine again. The following year, in the first round—you guessed it!

ARITHMETIC AWARD

Roberto de Vicenzo signed an incorrect scorecard after tying Bob Goalby for the 72-hole lead in 1968 and eliminated himself from a playoff. De Vicenzo's playing partner, Tommy Aaron, had put down a par 4 for the 17th hole—a hole on which a national television audience had watched him score a birdie 3. The four left de Vicenzo one shot behind Goalby, who was declared the winner. "I am a stupid," commented Roberto, tears in his eyes. "At my age, I may never have this chance again."

To be eligible to become a member of the senior golf association, a person has to be fifty years old and play in his age group. The age groups are divided into five divisions. The first is 50-54, the second 55-59, the third 60-64, the fourth 65-69, and the fifth 70 and over. There are fourteen members who are seventy years old or over. One member will be eighty-five years old this year.

Prizes are awarded on the basis of overall grand champion and runner-up in each age group on low gross and low net score. The prizes consist of certificates for merchandise.

The perennial secretary-treasurer has been C. Clarence Scott since the association was organized to the present time. The present practice is to have the president be a member of the host club where the tournament for the year is to be held. The present president is Virgil Powell of Malden, and Maurice Dunklin of Cape Girardeau is vice-president. The next tournament is to be held at the club of the vice-president. There are nine directors in the Association and these are elected from various clubs in the Southeast Missouri area. Last year at Jackson at the annual tournament of the one hundered seventy-two members, one hundred forty-three participated in the tournament action.

The scheduled events in the area of golf for Sikeston include three tournaments to be played here. On June 7 and 8 the four ball tournament will take place in Sikeston. Starting July 26 and running through the 27, the Sikeston Invitational is scheduled to occur. The Mixed Pairs Tournament will be held on September 13 and 14. Every Friday is couples golf within the country club. Also every other Thursday the Men's Golf Association holds a various tournament event.

The top golfers in Sikeston are Jim Warf, Tom Dawson, Fred Tope, David Newberry, David Bowman, and Bill Vandivert. Also the only one to make a hole in one honor this year was Jim Warf.

The Sikeston Country Club golf course was opened in the late 1930's. The additional nine holes were added in 1971 or about four years ago.

Gene Dawson has been a professional golfer for about nine years. The oldest Sikeston golfer title is held by two men. The two men are C. Clarence Scott and Tip Keller.

In 1955 Cary Middlecoff holed an eagle putt on the 13th that was estimated, by Middlecoff and the press, to be at least 75 feet. One writer, who paced off the distance, calculated it as 86 feet.

HIGH HOLES

Frank Walsh used up 12 shots on Number Eight in 1935. Herman Barron took 11 on the par-three 16th hole in 1950 and Dow Finsterwald took 11 at the par-three 12th hole in 1951.
